Vanguard Civil War(3515-3520)

Territorial War (3035 - 3040)

OmniCo Vanguard 3000-3035 After most of the military personnel and some workers from the Vanguard Co fled after a decade of unrest since it was sold to OmniCo three big idols stepped up to take charge, and lead the Vanguard Co refugees. Those men were Levict Venius son of the legendary vanguard Leviticus Venius, Orlandi Zarten an old vanguard, but left to be a Vanguard Co representative to OmniCo during negotiations between OmniCo and VanguardCo, and Banwell Leshius who was the old treasurer of VanguardCo but was replaced once OmniCo bought the company, Banwell was incredibly focused on coming up with a peaceful agreement between VanguardCo and OmniCo that would allow VanguardCo to become independent. They all agreed the refugees needed land, so they declared a war on the Fallen Kingdom in the area for space. By the end of the war a man named Hershius Conius became a known figure for his success in battle. At the end of the war the people decided someone should lead them, and Levict Venius took that role, and established the Republic Of The Vanguard or The Vanguard Republic. He established the Renocrat Party. Also in the war Levict met a man named Joey Corsius and they became close friends. Vanguard Victory.

Independence War (3030-3040)

After failed negotiations during the late 3020s the Vanguard led by Levict Venius declared war on OmniCo.

Earth War (3041 - 3045)

Levict decided in order to relieve any constant threat from the Fallen. In the war Levict and Joey grew towards each other, and Levict eventually set Joey as Vice Vanguard under supervision Joey tended to be hot headed. The war was a complete success with minimal vanguard deaths, but the Vanguard couldn't seem to take the Fallen's last camp, so they went back for supplies

Last Camp War (3045 - 3055)

After the Vanguard Army got resupplied they returned to the final Fallen camp where they were preparing escape pods. It would have been a quick war, but The Crusaders joined the Fallen. The Crusaders pushed deep into Vanguard territory, and at one point in 3049 the Crusader led a siege on the Vanguard Capital. Levict's excellent war strategies encircled the Crusaders, and captured all of the troops laying siege to the Capital by the end of 3049. Levict had been pushing his science team to develop new military weapons. Finally in 3050 the Vanguard knocked the Fallen fleeing and out of the war after they killed King Merzili. Leaving only the Crusaders in the war who held on until 3054 when the only Crusader left fighting were rogue commanders.

Mercury Air Force War (3060 - 3061)

After the Crusader endorsed assassination of former Prime Vanguard Levict Venius, and once Prime Vanguard Joey Corsius took power, Joey swore to take revenge on the Crusaders with an all out war on the Crusaders Head quarters planet. The Crusader's defenses in the sky were incredibly advanced, so Joey C sent the entirety of the Vanguard air force to break down their air force, and hopefully clear up a landing for ground troops. After a year the Vanguard had over 80% control in the sky of Mercury, and cleared an area for a landing.

Marching Mercury War (3061- 3065)

After the air force cleared an area for the ground troops Prime Vanguard sent in the ground troops for a distraction while Joey actually sent other troops to take the moons of mercury for a plan his intel crew had come up with. After the Crusader did find out about the moons they couldn't do anything about it because of the troops already invading Mercury. This ground invasion persisted until the moon plan was complete, and the Crusaders surrendered Mercury.

Mercury Moon War (3061 - 3061)

The capturing of the moon of mercury was incredibly easy because of the distraction on Mercury. The moment they did capture the moon the constructors, and scientists of the Vanguard spent the next 4 years building a Minor Gamma Ray Conductor (M.G.R.C) to hopefully threaten the Crusaders to surrender Mercury

Treaty Of Mercury (3065)

Joey Corsius gave the surrender terms to the Crusaders and they agreed. Joey had become a lot more humble from his 5 years as Prime Vanguard, and gave his opponent Hershius Conius his good word. Joey fully expected to keep pushing into Crusader planets, but another assassination most likely from the Fallen killed Joey Corsius on the day of mid term. Hershius Conius became Prime Vanguard and continued the rest of Joey's 10 year term. Hershius planned on economically and argucultiary rebuilding the Vanguard, but many Vangaurdians believed the Crusaders killed Joey.

Conquest War (3070 - 3080)

After the wildly beloved Prime Vanguard took office John Jimgore took the patriotism from the death of Joey, and forced the belief the Crusaders did it. Only 5 months into his leadership he declared a war on the Crusaders to eradicate them. John also knew the planets owned by the Crusader held many important resources for businesses, a big part of Jimgore's campaign. The Vanguard caught the Crusaders off guard, and they made incredible progress taking 1 planet by 3073. By 3076 the Crusaders had lost 2 planets, but now had strengthened their defense. On Mars they started to push back. Overall a turn began to happen in the war and the public opinion had become sick of war. Deserters skyrocketed, and so did casualties. Jimgore held on until 3079 where he began to withdraw troops, but left some behind, refusing to sign a peace treaty. The 3080 election came by, and Jimgore's image was ruined because of the war, and because of a drug controversy including him. Leaving Richard Herlius to become Prime Vanguard, and officially ended the Conquest War with Crusaders paying for war repairs since Vanguard patriotism was still very prominent.

East Side War (3085 - 3091)

PV Richard Herlius's leadership had been going very well until the Crusaders sought out revenge on the Vanguard, and launched a sneak attack on the east side of Earth hoping to easily take the Capital while the military out defending other planets. Unfortunately for the Crusaders Richard had started a military parade for the anniversary of Levict Venius's death. The moment the invasion was heard of, the Crusaders had only captured a radius of 100 miles. Fortunately for the Crusaders they had brought a large amount of troops, and were able to withstand the Vanguard attacks. Richard Herlius was not built for wartime leadership, and the Crusaders pushed into Vanguard territory until they had captured the entire east side of Earth by 3090. John Jimgore was elected into office in 3090, and immediately started to push the Crusaders back. Only a year later the Crusaders were pushed out of Earth, and forced to pay repairs. Jimgore's favoring rose a lot. Jimgore also was able to take many moons and micro moons of the Crusaders. It was found the Fallen were funding the Crusaders.

Impact War (3098 - 3105)

After almost 8 years of peace Jimgore was focusing on his Indocrat policies and implementing them, but then a major full force attack with a combined force with the Crusaders and the Fallen declared war on the Vanguard as a result for the Vanguard's past actions. Jimgore had been experiencing many mental illnesses as he approached 80 years old, and made few decisions in the war. Kyle Corsius and Ken Nurmenious made many decisions at this time. Kyle would use this to slowly build up his popularity and trust with Richard Herlius. Jimgore secured Mercury and Earth, but was unable to make orders on Mars. By 3099 the Fallen had completely taken Mar while the Crusaders made a landing on Venus. The 3100 election had Richard Herlius take office, and he immediately said he was not a great war time leader, and he was correct. He lost Venus within months, and just barely stopped the Crusaders from making a landing on Mercury, but the Crusaders took the moons of Mercury. A stalemate was held until 3101 the Fallen and Crusaders took the moon of Earth. Richard was able to hold them there until 3102 when the Fallen and Crusaders made a landing on Earth. Richard had finally begun to trust Kyle and so made Kyle Corsius the leader of the defense plans. Kyle couldn't come up with a decision until the Capital was surrounded. As a last ditch attempt Kyle called to use all military resources in one massive push. A saving grace moment for the Vanguard started to push them back. In 3103 they were forced off Earth. The Fallen left the war in 3104 after setting up a government on Mars. While the Crusaders stayed in the war, and they created a government on Venus. Kyle began to make progress in the war until in 3105 had the Crusader sign a peace treaty after both sides' economies were destroyed. Kyle Corsius easily won the next election by using his family name and his increased popularity during the impact war. Richard Herlius would spend the rest of his term increasing the quality of life for the population by massive proportions.

Economic Planetary War (3121 - 3125)

After the Impact War Kyle Corsius was handed a major economy crash, and he needed to find a way to fix it fast or the Vanguard would simply fall apart. Kyle came up with the plan to take clusters of valuable asteroids from the Crusaders, Fallen, and other smaller nations. As well as attempt to take planets with valuable minerals. The weakened Vanguard army was still able to easily capture the asteroids. The Crusaders and Fallen eventually put up a fight, but the Vanguard got what they wanted eventually. Kyle signed a treaty in 3125 that returned some resources. Kyle rebuilt the military.

Retake Conquest War (3126 - 3130)

Kyle Corsius eventually wanted to redeem himself from the past Conquest War, and declared war again on the Fallen and Crusaders as a sneak attack, but also Kyle needed to justify another war to take territory for resources for the ruined Vanguard economy. His first target was to take the resourceful moons of Mercury. Then to take back Mars.

Mercury War Of Metals (3126 - 3128)

PV Kyle Corsius had his eyes set on redeeming himself, but also the moons of Mercury which were rich with many precious metals. The air force quickly destroyed most defensive equipment on the moons, but progress halted the moment Crusader reinforcements arrived. The Vanguard was able to take one of the three moons by 3127, but generally both the Vanguard and Crusaders were more focused on other things. By 3128 the Crusaders couldn't afford to keep up the fight, and surrender the moons to the Vanguard.

The Fallen Mars War (3127 - 3128)

The Fallen had been refusing to make any deals with Kyle and the Vanguard since the end of the Impact War. Seeing the Fallen economy doing so well Kyle ordered a full forced invasion of Mars. catching the Fallen off guard the Vanguard made incredible progress, and captured half of the planet in 6 months while the Fallen military was mobilizing. When the Fallen military did get to the frontlines they pummeled the Vanguard troops. Casualties skyrocketed by hundreds of percent before anyone knew what happened. Kyle's incompetence led him to cause the Vanguard to lose incredible amounts of land until Jeraldus Julian the Defense Vanguard to take charge. Within months his great strategies took Mars by the beginning of 3128. The remaining Fallen armies escaped.

Earth War Of Metals (3128 - 3130)

The Crusaders after losing many of their home planet's moons and their economy tanking they decided to spend the rest of 3127 building up their military and being mostly defensive. The Crusaders continued this until mid 3128 when they launched an attack on Earth. In order to breach the Vanguard's local defensive airforce they got the remaining Fallen armies to help them if the Crusaders promised to give them a planet or dwarf planet to reside on until they can take back Mars. After breaching the increasingly large Vanguard air force defending the Earth's atmosphere in 3129 the infamous Crusader army which had been built up for a year completely desmooted any defending Vanguard armies, most of which were small since Kyle Corsius strongly believed the Crusaders wouldn't be able to land on Earth. By mid 3129 the Crusaders had reached a stalemate with a quarter of the planet taken. Most of the Vanguard population were sick of war and Kyle Corsius's already dwindling approval began to fall dramatically. Most money keeping the Vanguard economy afloat was indirectly selling precious metals from the Mercury moon to third parties who would then sell them to the Crusaders. Once this got out it was almost immediately picked up by Lauren Scori who was an avid pacifist and promised peace. Another candidate, Mike Mercedell began filling some of the population with newfound patriotism to defend Earth since peace at this point would include terrible terms for the Vanguard. In the end Lauren Scori won by 2% and immediately brokered a peace that established the Vanguard to slowly over Scori's term to turn into a nation living in the Crusaders shadow. Scori also built the Vanguard's fantastic education system and if he wouldn't have done that the Vanguard education system would cease to exist after the many cuts from funding during Mercedell's term and the poverty during Kernoff's term.

Vanguard Civil War (3510-3520)

Notable People

Levict Venius (2990 - 3060)70

Levict Venius was a highly respectable philosopher and son of the legendary Levicticus Venius during the Vanguard Co era. Then became one of the leaders of the revolutionary movement of the Vanguard. In 3040 he had more achievements than Orlandi Zarten, so he declared himself the first Prime Vanguard of the nation of Vanguard. Orlandi showed major distress toward this, and immediately started his campaign for 3050 where he coined the ideology of Omnicracy while Levict declared the ideology of a Mediocracy. During the 3050 debate Orlandi accused Venius of lying about the policies of a Mediocracy. Levict quickly brought the attention away, bringing up that Orlandi used to be a Omni Co representative. Levict ended up winning 3050. He became a national icon until 3100 when Richard Herlius sided with Orlandi, and implemented some Omnicracy policies in the Vanguard government. After 3100 it's generally stated Renocrats side with Orlandi while Civilcites side with Levict more. Levict Venius was brutally beaten to death by Kevenius Shotanius who was a Crusader funded crazed mentally ill man in 3060.

Orlandi Zarten (2990 - 3100)110

Orlandi Zarten was a highly respected leader during the revolutionary Movement of the Vanguard. He was a founding father of the Vanguard Revolutionary Movement. He became very close friends with Levict Venius in the 3010s along with Banwell Leshius from their mutual determination to have Vanguard Co become independent. In 3020 they were able to garner enough support and attention to their cause to start a committee to meet with the OmniCo officials to negotiate. Banwell and Orlandi both wanted to commit to negotiate things out, but Levict wanted full independence and was not budging on his position. In 3030 negotiations shut down and Levict garnered his supporters to fight for independence against OmniCo. Leshius had become extremely wary of Levict by this point and immediately pulled himself and his supporters away from the committee to attempt and try furthering negotiations with OmniCo. Orlandi had also become somewhat wary of Levict but still considered him a friend. He decided he wanted to try to help the supporters of Levict by trying to round out the government Levict was going to create. During the 3030s Orlandi's opinion of Levict had fallen far out of being an acquaintance and into him being a misled peer. In the 3040s Levict had tried to oust Orlandi from any powerful position which dropped Orlandi's opinion of him even more, especially after he declared him Prime Vanguard. In 3050 after the election Levict had many people searching and trying to kill him. This made Orlandi fear not only for his own life but of all of the people living the Vanguard. He knew Levict had to be removed from power in order to save the Vanguard, so he got in contact with Banwell Leshius once again and began concocting a plan to assassinate Levict Venius with the resources of Banwell Leshius(The Crusaders). After the plan was executed a moderately ranked military officer named Halius Bernlian (born 3010) was set up to take the fall of the conspiracy when Orlandi Zarten and Banwell Leshius purposely left documents regarding his activity to the conspiracy open to be found. Bernlian played an integral role in the plan and was the sole reason why the plan was able to take place on time as Bernlian ran a military transport checkpoint.

Banwell Leshius (2980 - 3080)100

He was a founding father of the Vanguard Revolutionary Movement, and great friends with Orlandi Zarten with a distaste of Levict Venius. He would go on to be the founding father of the Crusaders.

Hershius Conius (3010 - 3100)90

Hershius Conius, in his early life was a well renowned soldier during the

John Jimgore (3020 - 3120)100

Gregius Kernoff (3130 - 3215) 85

Gregius was apprentice of Ivonious Korshious, but ultimately his beliefs shifted more to a complete dictatorship, and the end of his second term and his third term Gregius had established a radical unitocracy authoritarian police state before he was overthrown and impeached where he was then put on trail and put in prison in 3205. Gregius's senate were all kicked off and some were arrested as well. Calmarius Nullius was hoping Gregius would be rehabilitated and was planning on releasing him in only a decade. After his arrest though, a movement popularized by Gregius's apprentice, Ivern Gornia , had begun spreading Kernocratism and by 3210 began the Vanguard Kerno Rebellion. Almost immediately Gregius Kernoff was broken out of prison and he and Ivern ravaged across the Vanguard for 5 more years. Gregius and Ivern killed the beloved Haroldius Vernisi who was Civic Vanguard under Gregius, but for the last few years of Gregius's reign had been helping the plot against him. Eventually the Vanguard began to put down the rebellion, and Gregius, knowing the end was near, shot himself.

Vonius Venlencian(3270 - 3360)

People in the Vanguard talk of "The Game" which is to secure power for yourself for your entire life. This game was played by many in the past with only a few making a few beneficial moves. Many people believe Levict Venius was playing the Game. Vonius committed his entire life to playing the Game since he was 20. He played his cards extremely well and landed himself a seat on the newly and easily manipulated Jury Government established by Limlan Dornisi and Teran Lawrencian when he was 30. He had managed to convince most of the nation his peers were playing the Game and had them arrested allowing him to establish an authoritarian regime in his name by only 50. It was his ultimate goal to last his entire life in power. Almost immediately Vonius recognized a possible crack in his regime revolving around Indocrat Arnian Menish, and so in 3330 he had him denounced, forcing Arnian to flee. Arnian Menish then started an underground group working against Vonius. Vonius advertised himself as a continuation of Levict Venius and he worked hard to reteach the masses that Venius was a perfect person instead of him being taught to people like he has been since 3160 (flawed and controversial but still respectable) Vonius eventually officially left the Renocrat Party in 3340 when he realized the Renocrat Party was mostly full of people against him and he was giving them a platform, so he joined the party he reformed 20 years before, the Pectacite Party. Vonius also realized having 5 people surrounding him at all time was too dangerous as one of them had already tried to kill him(Vance Nurmenious) and so in 3340 Vonius dissolved the Prime Advisors. He also quietly made it illegal to run against him in elections. In 3350 the cracks were beginning to show in Vonius's regime as he was beginning to struggle to hold back the thousands of riots and coups. Finally in 3355 an official rebellion was formed headed by Arnian Menish and Vonius's son Verson Venlencian who believed in the Pectacites, but also believed Vonius had gone too far. Finally after the bombing of the Venlencian Palace where Vonius was critically injured by debris. He was found by Verson and Arnian. Vonius went on to say "I committed my life to the Game and I was better than everyone else... I played my hand well, and even then with the knowledge of Mercedell, Kernoff, and Venius I didn't have enough knowledge to win. I've lasted the longest... and the next prominent figure of the Game will know exactly what to do to win the game for he will have my knowledge, but I... I have lost"

Paul Henkian(3320-3440)

Anglen Fornstornian(3320-3405)

Anglen became an incredibly influential person during the Era Of Terror(3370-3410). He took a very aggressive front against all forms of terrorism. He also greatly helped with the establishing of the Vanguard Homeland Protection Agency along with Paul Henkian and Benlin K. Schloemen. During his leadership Anglen Fornstornian sent out brutal squads of people to hunt down members of any terrorist organization and kill them. Anglen Fornstornian took a much more no tolerance stance on terrorism than Paul Henkian. All of this made him a target for an assassination. Which happened in 3405 when an associate of the Tenurian Venlencian Pectacritic Fighters(T.V.P.F / Niza) killed Anglen Fornstornian during a public rally with Illnius Tenurian announcing that he had been captured. Tenurian was able to escape in the chaos, but the TVPF would fall behind considerably in power. He was replaced after a newly enforced special election took place and his top Senate Vanguard Benlin K. Schloemen.

Benlin K. Schloemen(3340-3460)120

Benlin K. Schloemen was very close advisor to Anglen Fornstornian, so with many people still with Fornstornian close to their hearts after his death, Benlin was able to run a extremely successful campaign based on how close he was to Anglen and his "New Pectacite Movement" policies. Benlin believed Verson Venlencian was too radical while not believing in a complete dictatorship like Vonius, he did believe the Prime Vanguard should have the final say in everything. Verson wanted to change the senate into advisors. Benlin believed in a government style similar to the Vanguard in the 3050's and 60's. Benlin was strongly against the One Termed Proposal and constantly said he will not suppress his own power when he knows it will do good for the Vanguard.

Kevin Offen(3360 - 3480)120

An incredibly popular celebrity turned politician that was immensely popular during his term as Prime Vanguard and as Civic Vanguard. Seen as well rounded in Industry and Suburb, which what made him a popular candidate (well rounded)

Berklan Crantus (3390-3510)130

An incredibly successful entrepreneur for an interstellar delivery and transport company called PanOrbit. Founded in 3420 when Crantus was 30, it had a slow upbringing, but during his 40s the company exploded, and some believed it to be the next OmniCo, 350 years later. By 3440, Crantus had entered the political scene and exploded in popularity with Indocrat's, He followed closely with a Palium Lancelust regarding big business. He ran for Civic Vanguard for the Industry Sector, as well as he ran for Prime Vanguard, but he ended up losing the race for PV. He did win the Industry Sector, in which he would serve to help large corporations as well as stimulate his own business. When he turned 90 he was not reelected for Industry Sector, but he had been able to expand PanOrbit to an incredible size that competed with the largest companies in the social system. He continued to serve as CEO of PanOrbit until he died in 3510, and his son Edenian Crantus took over the company at the age of 80.

Vance Nurmenious(3290-3405)115

Vance was a high ranking member of the Vonius Venlencian regime, being Vonius's top advisor from 3330 to 3340 and a Civic Vanguard. He was ultimately ousted from power and put on the run after it was uncovered his coup plot against Vonius in 3340. In 3360 when the Old Ways rebellion won and the first election took place, Vance was still in hiding fearing he would be arrested like many of the other high ranking members of the Vonius regime, but he still anonymously provided Illnius Tenurian with information against his opponents. In 3370 when the T.V.P.F terrorist organization was founded Vance met with Tenurian and gave him info on military shipments. He was put on the suspect list for being involved with them, but the government was not very active on these terrorist groups yet. In 3380 Vance took the opportunity of Verson Venlencian being the frontrunner and began to try to twist the story of the reason why he tried to plot against Vonius is because he was trying to liberate the Vanguard. This got him elected and he spent most of his time as Intel Sector Vanguard giving secrets to the TVPF nizas. Only a few weeks into Vance's second term in 3390 Paul Henkian personally uncovered all of the treason Vance had committed which forced him on the run with Tenurian and the rest of the TVPF. There Vance was the head of intelligence for the TVPF. He was finally killed in 3405 when the main HQ of the TVPF was raided and Tenurain sacrificed him to allow for him to escape.

Santiua Barena (3210 - 3340) 130

In his youth he was an activist against the Morlem administration's lack of attention to some communities as well as the overall lack of funding for many government programs under Ransomi Earnious . After his brief political popularity in 3240 when he got second in the PV election he greatly protested the Lancelust administration, but then went on to go into the education industry. He reentered politics in late 3270 and ran against Ferdius Namsian in 3280 as he said he was clearly a puppet of Morlem and him being elected would destroy the integrity of Vanguard democracy. This stance caused him to meet Teran Lawerncian and while he thought he was way to centrist he greatly helped him in his 3290 campaign. During the 3290s Barena's relationship with Lawerncian broke down after constant disagreements with methods of controlling corruption and general policies. In 3300 though Barena ran against Limlan Dornici and his Committee Government idea. He warned against its potential corruption despite the fact that it was meant to stop corruption. In 3330 Barena helped Arnian Menish on his campaign and when he lost and Vonius Venlencian quietly removed elections, Barena and Menish co-founded the Old Ways Association where they gathered people who dissented the current government. He died in 3340 after telling Verson Venlencian about their group and to join it.

Evanict Bronlen (3000 - 3130)130

Bronlen was born the year the Vanguard Company was scammed and bought by Omni Co. He had a deep hatred for OmniCo and those below him by his uncle Harr Bronlen. In 3015, Bronlen killed both of his parents after finding out that they had helped Omni Co in scamming Vanguard Co for high ranked jobs. After that Bronlen would carry out attacks on OmniCo facilities. When he was 20 he met Levict Venius in person after going to his public speeches for years. Venius decided to hire him as a propagandist/advertiser to bring more people to support the rebellion movement. Bronlen became extremely successful in this work. He was known for his master manipulation tactics with OmniCo officials. If any members of the movement would give up and give information to OmniCo Bronlen would expertly dismantle their livelihoods. During the Independence War Bronlen became the head of all propaganda and made sure to assimilate most of the youth into the army. In the later years of the war Bronlen created an initiative to search and capture troops that deserted and make them suicide bombers. While this program was kept hidden by Venius to Orlandi Zarten and Ken Nurmenious, it was exceptionally successful for the Vanguard's effort. Finally in 3040 while Venius, Zarten, and Nurmenious were creating an initial government, Bronlen had to come out of secrecy and was put in charge of the propaganda department of the Vanguard. He was unable to use many of his immoral tactics during the 3040s since he operated under Orlandi Zarten. It was when Meless Nemphemus retired from the early intelligence sector and Venius replaced him with Bronlen he began to implement harsh, authoritarian punishments to anyone who didn't perceive the government propaganda. In 3050 he was appointed to replace Orlandi Zarten, and his inhumane policies increased. By the time Levict Venius died Bronlen had made many enemies throughout the government, specifically Joey Corsius and Ken Nurmenious which caused him to be forcefully ousted from government. He appeared again consulting Mike Mercedell on his campaign in 3130, before dying shortly after.

Mike Mercedell (3080 - 3210)130

Joined the army in 3100 at the age of 20 during his 20s he rapidly progressed up the military hierarchy through his bravery and courage. By the time he was 30 he was a Captain in the military becoming the second youngest captain ever only being beaten by Joey Corsius who was 25 when he became Captain. During his 30s he constantly applied to become a Commanding General but was always rejected. Mercedell became close with his Commanding General. When he was 35 he became the second youngest General only beaten by Joey Corsius who became a General at 30. It was also at this time when Mercedell's commanding general announced he would be resigning after his contract ended in 5 years, and he avidly pushed for Mercedell to be chosen as his replacement. Mercedell gained some small media attention at this time. Then when he turned 40 in 3120 he became the youngest Commanding General. At this point he was a leading figure in the Defense Sector and thus the rest of the political atmosphere of the Vanguard. He met regularly with Defense Sector Civic Vanguard Jeraldious Julian who shared his violent vigor. On some occasions Mercedell would brief Prime Vanguard Kyle Corsius. Mercedell quickly became a regular guest on political talk shows and news channels. He would speak on how the war was being handled and what should be done in the future by politicians. He also spoke boldly on politics. He was especially focused on Kyle Corsius claiming he was a poser who was corrupting the Corsius name. Mercedell briefly served with Kyle Corsius in 3100 while Corsius was working part time as a military computer programmer. By his mid 40s Mercedell had become an official attending member of the Civilcite Party. He would constantly say that the party was failing because of it being overrun by moderates like Kyle Corsius. Mercedell had garnered a considerable following in the public and in the Civilcite Party. At this point public opinion of Kyle Corsius was at an all time low and the public was sick of war but split on whether they should do anything for peace or if they need to properly assert themselves and commit to war fully and strategically. Mercedell spoke out mercilessly against the newly selected controversial Renocrat candidate Lauren Scori who was a young sworn pacifist. Many people called on Mercedell to run and he finally announced it in 3128. Kyle Corsius spoke out profusely against this, and Corsius would be the only Civilcite to oppose Mercedell, seeking a third term despite being hated. Mercedell would win the nomination in 3129 and Kyle Corsius would refuse to accept it. Corsius stated he would still run under the Civilcite Party despite not having a nomination. He was ultimately forced to run under the Independent Party but many ballots had him listed as a Civilcite as well. The 3130 elections had the following results: Mercedell (Civilcite Party) - 39% Lauren Scori (Renocrat Party) - 40%

Kyle Corsius - 29%. Mercedell also ran for Defense Sector Civic Vanguard which he won easily. Mercedell never agreed or voted with a single thing Scori introduced during his tenure, and with many people being absolutely furious with the Vanguard's interstellar position because of Scori's policies, Mercedell easily won the 3140 Election against a new Renocrat candidate Timernius Gorn. Gorn was a more strict Renocrat who believed in a mix of both Mercedell's foreign policy and Scori's, and he would've been more popular if the Renocrat Party wasn't despised by the public in 3140. In 3160, headed by Ivonius Korshious, Mercedell was arrested and put on trial for violating the Vanguard constitution and breaking the powers of the Prime Vanguard. He was banned from running for public office again, and Korshious would put considerable effort into making sure the public didn't support him. Mercedell got a job as Chairman of a militia group until 3180. In 3170 when Luke Conius became Prime Vanguard, Mercedell attempted to use the more lenient Indocrat Party to get involved more in politics, but he could never gain a voice since no talk show would host him. In 3180 Gregius Kernoff sent off a firestorm of smear campaigns against Mercedell and called for him to be imprisoned, so Mercedell went into hiding until reappearing at a special Prime Vanguard reunion party in 3205 with the newly made Prime Vanguard Calmarus Nullius and Luke Conius. He was thought to be dead so the media picked him back up and he attempted to gain leverage once more, but the political atmosphere was not on his side and while some Civilcites publicly agreed with him, Jeranian Xavier put an end to it when he publicly denounced Mercedell claiming that while he agrees that the Vanguard needs to assert themselves, Mercedell is still a wannabe hot head dictator and the Civilcite party must move on. After that Mercedell once again fell into relative obscurity and only a few months later in 3206 a 126 year Mike Mercedell was forced out of the public eye until his death in 3210 because of health issues.

Vanguard Political Parties

Renocrat Party

Established 304

(3040 - 3090) - High Authoritarian

Established by Levict Venius as a vessel he thought he would use throughout his reign once the Vanguard Ideological Debate(3030 - 3060) was over. Originally was formed as a party that would endorse major authoritarians. Traditional Renocrats/ Venius Renocrats believed strongly in high and powerful government with clear hierarchy between the leader and their inner circle and the rest of the population. Venius Renocrats traditionally do not have any radical social policies. Although in 3060 a gradual shift began to happen in the party with the Civilcite Party's founding and with it starting with such a favored person who was close friends with Levict Venius, Joey Corsius, many of the higher ups in the Renocrat Party received invitations to the Civilcite Party and they accepted. This led to many people that opposed the Civilcite Party to use an already established party as a vessel to oppose the Civilcite's instead of founding an entirely new party. While new politicians joined the shrinking Renocrat Party with their different beliefs. This event was later named the Defining Movement Period (3060 - 3090). In 3068 when the Indocrat Party was officially founded many of the people in the Renocrat Party that were better affiliated with the Indocrat Party switched over further allowing the Renocrat Party to narrow down its general beliefs. Most members of the Renocrat party after 3080 were Modern Renocrats but the Party officially declared its new beliefs in 3090. The Renocrat Party would have another split headed by Vonius Velencian who was a radical traditional Renocrat. This was soon stopped when he reformed the Pectacite Party.

Independent Party

(3050 -) - N/A

Founded by Orlandi Zarten

Civilcite Party

Established 3060

Pectacite Party

Established 3150

Dismantled 3165

(3150 - 3165) - Extreme Right / Extreme High Authoritarian

Founded by Julianius Julian

While the party was attempted to be saved by Jeraldious Julian Jr, after 5 years he realized he couldn't save it and dismantled it. Jeraldious Jr would go on to work with Charles Orkan with his political philosophy after he lost reelection for the Defense Sector.

Reformed 3320

(3320 -) Extreme High Authoritarian / Venius Renocrat

Reformed by Vonius Venlencian (3320)

Reformed by Verson Venlencian (3360)

After the Old Ways Rebellion Vonius's son Verson Venlencian who still believed in the principles of the Pectacite party and the ways of Levict Venius, Ken Nurmenious and Micheal Wensaw, and so he fought vigorously to stop Arnian Menish from outlawing the Pectacite Party and transformed it into a legitimate party.

Unfinished Terms

(3040 - 3300) - In this time frame when a P.V was killed or resigned before their term was over instead of there being a new election, the person in second place from the previous election would take over for the rest of the term

(3300 -) - After 3300 as a part of Limlan Dornici's Jury Government it was made so there would be a special election for the remainder of the unfinished term.

Corporate Committee (C.C)

Established by Micheal Wensaw in 3060 as a key part of the newly founded Industry Sector. Micheal Wensaw strongly believed in a sort of hierarchy in the Industry Sector but not tyrannically. He established the C.C as a way for corporations to discuss with each other sponsors, policies, trades, and issues. The C.C also from 3060 to 3070 fully controlled the P.A with no input from any workers besides mail in requests, and in some situations they would have a meeting. Once Wensaw established the W.A the power of the C.C was scaled back considerably. In the new P.A representatives from C.C had double the power than the W.A representatives. The C.C could no longer bend the wages of workers without any recourse. After 3070 the C.C became a high class stock exchange for corporations to meet with each other.

Payroll Association (P.A)

Established by Micheal Wensaw in 3060 as a key part of the young Industry Sector.

The P.A was initially made as a complex ingenious system created by Wensaw that ensured a stable payment system to workers, but as he saw it at the time the power of the actual wages of the workers should only be in the hands of the C.C and the workers had no say. This would change in 3070 after a number of scandals. After the W.A's founding a complete makeover of the previous system of the Industry Sector was conducted. The P.A became not only a place ensuring stable cash flow, but a place to discuss and vote on wage issues between the C.C and W.A. The C.C would have less representatives but their votes would be worth twice as much while the W.A would have more representatives but their votes counted less.

Workers Association (W.A)

Established in 3070 by Micheal Wensaw as a key part of the Industry Sector.

The W.A was established after Micheal Wensaw realized a clear unhappiness and injustices in the previous system with the P.A and the workers having no association. The W.A was made for workers to come together, plan strikes/unions, and represent each other in the P.A.

Industry Relations Committee (I.R.C)

Established in 3150 by Ivonious Korshious

Vanguard Peace Association (V.P.A)

Established in 3205 by Calmarus Nullius

Dismantled in 3320 by Vonius Venlencian

After the Kernoff Wars the social system needed peace, not just temporary peace like it had been like in the past by a controlled permanent peace. Nullius would establish a council where meetings were held every 2 months where all prominent Vanguardian figures would convene on issues and attempt to resolve them; with an underlining on foreign affairs . Nullius invited the Crusaders and the Fallen to these meetings and had them establish their own Peace Association(The Crusader Peace Association and Fallen Peace Association). These associations worked in tune to create a world without major wars and a world of complete peace until 3270 when Tim Morlem took over a smaller planet nation after they had a border skirmish over resources. During the Vonius reign he knew a powerful committee like the VPA would harbor revolutionaries, so he dismantled it and went on with a terrible war.

Vanguard National Front Association (V.N.F.A)

Established 3215 by Jeranian Xavier

Made as a communicative resource that has all high ranking military officials meet at least once a year. Jeranian Xavier considered it his best achievement as it would be a key resource when warfare would take over eventually. Was considered a part of Xavier's statement against the VPA and that warfare will inevitably happen and it is best if the Vanguard got ahead of it.

Nullius Conference (N.C)

Established 3065 by Arnian Menish

An intergalactic conference which works to secure peace for all. Named after Calmarus Nullius. Very similar to VPA. The main difference is that the Nullius Conference has one large committee held on neutral ground for all nations.

One Termed Proposal

Written in 3370 by Arnian Menish

A proposal that Menish believed would work towards limiting the chance of a dictator rising up again by having Prime Vandards only be able to serve one term. Menish had said that will be running for a second term as he thought it was very necessary to rebuild the Vanguard. The Proposal almost passed multiple times in the 3070s but was always ultimately sent back for revision which Menish would always mostly stand his ground on what the Proposal would be. The Proposal was removed during 3385 after years of Verson Venlencian upping government power and him debating the proposal was too limiting and unjust. The proposal still lived on in candidate's heads and Paul Henkian would announce he would not be running for a second term and Anglen Fornstronian would also announce after he had won the 3400 election he would not run again in 3410 despite being popular. After Fornstornian's assassination the One Termed Proposal mostly fell out of the minds of the people and candidates

The Great Growth

(3050 -3060)

Once the Vanguard had established its territory and its people became relatively safe, the country saw an incredible increase in population from 3050 to 3060. Many of these children were not very conscious during Levict Venius's reign, but they were during the Defining Movement Period; this made most of the generation very open to different opinions. In the end though a majority of the generation would turn out to be staunch Renocrats, with most of the rest staying more leniently voting Indocrat and Civilcite. This led to the Renocrat Surge.

Renocrat Surge

(3075 - 3080)

Defining Movement Period

(3060 - 3090)

Bipartisan Era

(3390 - 3405)

Radical Split

(3405 - 3430)

Isolated Era

(3405-3440)

The Isolated Era was a point in time in the Vanguard history where the Vanguard was almost completely cut off by the rest of the world with only a few companies being able to operate outside of the Vanguard as well as in through some loopholes (promotley PanOrbit). This came as a result of the Radical Split (3405-3430) where the most prominent candidate Benlin K. Schloemen was very keen on cutting off the Vanguard from the outside world. Even Tillel Cantwoolus was not strongly against this, and did not work to overturn Schloemen's isolationist policies. Curan Shanvenian ran on a promise in 3440 to open the Vanguard back up while still keeping the Vanguard relatively self sufficient. As opposed to Bilian Crantus's idea of fully opening up the Vanguard and having most of their resources imported in an attempt to greatly reduce the cost of items through bulk deals and lower labor costs in other spots of the social system.

Unifying Plan / Deradicalization Movement

(3430-3450)

Started by Kevin Offen's incredibly successful 3430 campaign. Policies implemented harbored compromise to aid as many views as possible. These policies had the effect of bringing Vanguard's politics to a more moderate viewpoint as many Vanguardians became sick of the radicals. This led to a downturn of the Pectacite Party and Unicrat Party and a popularization of the Indocrat, Civilcite Party and Renocrat Party. Specifically the Pectacite Party which had been failing to bring in younger members began to fall into irrelevance, and their position as a major political party was beginning to be questioned in 3450.

Sardellius's Tenure

Siftwell Sardellius was a very outspoken and loud figure who pushed the Vanguard back into the position of an interstellar super power above all of the other large nations in the social system. Something that was lost when the bloody Old Ways Rebellion War destroyed the nation's economy, military and most other departments of a nation. Siftwell famously never backed down at the Nullius Conferences forcing the other nations to comply with the Vanguard's demands. He made incredible innovations in military technologies. He became incredibly popular by the 3480 election and won relatively easily. Unfortunately Siftwell held a rally when he won and was attacked by a group of political enemies unhappy about the election. He was badly injured and was in a terrible state, but still conscious. After a few weeks his health began deteriorating quickly and after he had 2 strokes, signs showed that he was going to fall into a coma, so in an effort to make sure the Renocrats and Indocrats in the Senate couldn't initiate a special election when he falls unconscious (the rules to start a special election would be if the current PV dies or falls unconscious for an extended period of time) Siftwell appointed his Prime Advisor and Civic Vanguard of the Containment Sector Lantian Fitzrell and Acting Prime Vanguard. Only a week later Siftwell fell into a coma. Fitzrell held very similar policies as Siftwell, but he was more traditional which overtime made the Civilcite Party slowly become more popular. After 2 years of being in a coma Siftwell woke up but was in bad shape. It took another year for him to fully remember everything, and the next 2 years would be spent relearning motor functions. This whole ordeal changed Siftwell. After Sardellius returned to his position as PV, Lantian Fitzrell did not return to his original position as Civic Vanguard of the CS as the Senate would have forced a special election which would pose the threat of losing some Pectacites in the Senate. Instead the current Chairperson of the Containment Sector stepped down and a special election was held for the Chairperson of the Containment Sector was held instead, which Fitzrell won. He became paranoid and bipolar, being very angry or scared at a moment's notice. Siftwell would become too paranoid; he would cut the Vanguard off from universal trade. The last 5 years of Siftwell made the Pectacite pretty unpopular. In the end the whole event ended up shaving a majority of Siftwell's life off. He ended up dying only at 70.

3490's

After Sardellius's failed second term people became more appreciative of Fitzrell's 5 years of leadership which had a more traditional aspect to it as far as socially. This caused a large increase in popularity in the Civilcite party as they had started to become more traditional. The people also wanted to repair their relationship with the rest of the world after Sardellius destroyed it. This is something Patrick Lenmenian always campaigned on. He was able to win the presidency even though the senate was packed full of mostly traditionalists. Among those traditionalists was a Unicrat named Wenchaw Nermian who believed strongly in leftist economic policy but was extremely traditionalist. This would harbor a bizarre coalition between the Unicrat and Civilcite party. For Lenmenian's first 4 years he worked on repairing and globalizing the Vanguard, but as he started to try to put in place his own economic and social policies the people and senate freaked out. In only a year they were able to put together an impeachment for Lenmenian. While Mike Mercedell was impeached in his last few days of office and banned from running again, in the Vanguard government of the 3400s impeachments were extremely difficult and the case for Lenmenian could've been thrown out by him, but not wanting to be in office while everyone hated him, he conceded. A special election was held and Jornan Erfendnet won.

Vanguard Civil War

This issue of traditionalists vs progressives in the Vanguard had become an incredibly dividing topic in the mid 3500s despite its overwhelming popularity in the late 3490s and early 3500s. Many younger generations began speaking up against the traditionalist government. At the head of the movement was Pultian Hindsius and Kerner Kinsi. By the late 3500s it was assumed a slight majority of the population favored progressives over traditionalists furiously. While the other half of the population defended traditionalists passionately. This all caused some of the senate to vote slightly more progressive meaning PV Jornan Erfendnet had more difficulty passing his traditionalist policies. Meanwhile the open public vote policies were either recounted many times before passing or not passing at all since the public had a slightly higher progressive vote. In response Erfendnet began to test the limits of his executive power by shoving many of his policies through executive orders. When the 3510 election came Kerner Kinsi ran instead of Pultian Hindsius since the standard Unicrat policies got a spike of popularity around this time. Kinsi lost the election by less than a percent and when the results came out riots broke out across the nation. By 3511 it was a regular occurrence of violent altercations between supporters of both sides. PV Wenchaw Nermian began to distance himself from any strong opinions in all fields of his work and became mostly inactive, barely showing his face. Wenchaw Nermian was an incredibly intellectual man, but had been overwhelmed by the strong controversies at every corner at this time. At this time Pultian Hindsius and Kerner Kinsi worked with Acker Brontian to create the Vanguard Forward Association. By 3513 the V.F.A had been able to get many members of the current government to join, including the progressive Orderly Vanguard Hinwell Honcian. They were unable to get Frank Gernian to join who held a more centrist stance. Wenchaw Nermian was forced to come to the V.F.A headquarters and said "violence is not the answer right now" to the Vanguard Traditionalist Association who had been attacking the V.F.A sometime. In 3515 Pultian Hindsius and Kerner Kinsi did not come into work and refused to vote on any legislation. Now Civic Vanguard Jornan Erfendnet realizing the rising threat of progressives steered Wenchaw Nermian to do his bidding. First Erfendnet tried to pass legislation that would say the Vanguard Republic would work with the V.T.A which would then give the Vanguard better legal standing to attack the V.F.A. This was sent to the Grand Court where they had to hold a special election for the open Orderly Vanguard spot since Erfendnet fed everyone the information that Hinwell Horcian was dead. After a traditionalist Orderly Vanguard got sworn in the Grand Court then voted to let the Senate vote without Hindsius and Kinsi. Once the Vanguard military was given the go ahead to attack many of them defected to the V.F.A who are now calling themselves the Vanguard Rebel Republic with Pultian Hindsius as PV, and Kerner Kinsi and Acker Brontian as Vice Vanguards. When Acker Brontian sided strongly with the progressives, he pulled over with him most of the Indocrat Party. Brontian and Kinsi met with Patrick Lenmenian hoping to have him side with them since he was a big symbol of the older Renocrat Party. Lenmenian refused though as he disliked Hindsius and didn't think they could win the civil war. As a last ditch attempt Kerner Kinsi and Acker Brontian both went to a senior home and met the 135 year old Wilhelmian Larstrum bound to a wheelchair, he listened to their cause and decided to side with the progressives. This was a massive win for the progressives as Wilhelmian Larstrum was not only beloved by the old Renocrats but the new ones as well. Lenmenian then became one of the last big Renocrat figures not sided with the progressives besides Term Pasteem. Lenmenian decided to; in his mind, save the Renocrat Party by leading a neutral stance on the civil war when he became the Party Head. After the civil war ended Hindsius pursued Lenmenian to be officially banned and ousted from any political office, his social status was also destroyed. The civil war was extremely bloody, but the progressives won by 3520.

Post-War Social Era

(3520 - 3540)

Pultian Hindsius ran and won the election for prime Vanguard and immediately began passing more progressive policies to try to undo what the traditionalists did and expand more on progressive issues. There was still a large portion of the nation that was traditionalist and felt how the progressives felt in the 3500s and 3510s. Lark Dorlian became the main speaker for the traditionalists at this time as he was able to evade punishments since he was not largely involved in the civil war. In 3530 Lark Dorlian ran again for PV and won through a technicality; he didn't win a majority of the vote with two candidates running. This caused him to be incredibly unpopular and seen as a fraudulent Prime Vanguard. His term got very little done, but it did stop any progress for the progressives during his term. Lark Dorlian pushed the boundaries of his office to escape any impeachment attempts. When the 3540 election came around Pultian Hindsius began moving more and more extreme on patrolling social beliefs. This was most criticized by the newly elected Indocrat Head Dornum Bakrumian who believed Hindsius was doing the same thing Erfendent and the traditionalists were doing. Kerner Kinsi backed Bakrumian in this belief. Bakrumian shared similar beliefs with Kevin Offen regarding unifying the Vanguard. Bakrumian was convinced to run by Kerner Kinsi and many in the Indocrat Party. He also had garnered support in the Civilcite Party. Pultian Hindsius doubled down on his more extreme beliefs during the election against Bakrumian. After Dornum Bakrumian won the election he finally executed the Menish-Rebelling Clause after Pultian Hindsius and Lark Dorlian refused to, finally adopting many of the previously lost freedoms of the Vanguard before the Civil War and Erfendent. Bakrumian also focused on rebuilding the Vanguards devastated economy and loosing restrictions on local and large businesses to allow them to grow more. This was something he was criticized on, but it did bring the Vanguard economy back by the end of 3550. During the 3540 election the main division moved away from progressives vs traditionalists and more into whether or not certain ideas should be banned in the Vanguard. Pultian Hindsius was heading the idea of restricting or banning certain ideas in order to protect future governments.

Omni Co Family (Cornwallen's)

Founding of OmniCo(2870)

Dissolved (3040)

Arshious Cornwallen (2840-2930)90

(2870-2930)

Founded OmniCo and brought it up to be a very competitive company to other delivery based businesses. Was 30 when he founded the business. Never retired, worked until he died

Darnenious Cornwallen (2880-2980)100

(2930-2970)

Took over the company at the age of 50 in 2930. Was a main contributor to making OmniCo a new stage of corporations when he began to buy plots of land from governments and then succeeded them from that government leaving it in a single OmniCo domain. This made OmniCo a government in that of itself while also being A corporation. In 2970 OmniCo became the largest company in the social system, and in history. Darnenious retired after achieving this at the age of 90 leaving the CEO position to pass down to his son, Darnenious Cornwallen II at the age of 60

Darnenious Cornwallen II (2910-3010)100

(2970-3010)

Took over the company at the age of 60 in 2970. Cemented OmniCo's position as a governing body and monopoly. Darnenious II began focusing more on buying out different companies more than expanding on the OmniCo delivery focus. This started the OmniCo monopoly on many more things than delivery. Buying over 70 companies by 3000. The final company OmniCo would purchase would be the Vanguard Private Force (after bought, Omni VanguardCo) The Vanguard officials were not keen on selling, so he concocted a plan to force them to. He was able to mislead The Republic which owned the land the Vanguard P.F was stationed to abandon the territory. Once this happened the nearby Fallen Kingdom and Hinden Governorate, and many other nations began to fight over the territory and get rid of the Vanguard P.F in the process since Darnenious II convinced everyone they were dangerous. IT was because of this that the Vanguard officials signed off the company in order to protect themselves from the other nations.

Renshious Cornwallen (2940-3030)90

(3010-3030)

suffered from a heart attack after hearing of the news of VanguardCo rebelling , and overall leading the OmniCo through their fall

Arshious Cornwallen II (2970-3035)65

(3030-3035)

Took over OmniCo at the age of 60 after his father Renshious Cornwallen suffered from a heart attack after hearing of the news of VanguardCo, and overall leading the OmniCo through their fall. Was killed by Levict Venius in 3035 during negotiations on a field.

Venishious Cornwallen (3010-3120)110

(3035-3040)

Took over at the age of 25, and only stayed as CEO of OmniCo out of respect for his father and not wanting to pass on the burden to his 15 year old brother Leshious. Once the OmniCo did collapse in 3040, Venishious was able to flee with his brother to a secret family manor deep within the mountains of Earth. Venishious was never fond of his family's past, or the company's. He was terrified to go into public fearing for his life as the Vanguard's point of view for the Cornwallen's were very violent until the 3100's when Richard Herlius was able to somewhat mellow out the nation, but they were still largely frowned on. Finally in 3120 Venishious was convinced by his family to have a press meeting in the Vanguard. When this came out many people showed as it was thought Leshious and Venishious died at the end of OmniCo and with it the Cornwallen family.

Leshious Cornwallen (3020-3130)110

Brother of Venishious, and second son of Arshious Cornwallen II

Arshious Cornwallen III (3050-3170)120

Son of Venishious Cornwallen, and named after his grandfather out of respect for his early death.

Venishious Cornwallen II (3080-3190)110

Venishious Cornwallen III (3120-3240)120

First Cornwallen to grow up outside captivity.

Nemnious Cornwallen (3160-3280)120

Worked in politics and was associated with Calmarus Nullius and the reforming of government after the Kernoff regime.

Larenious Cornwallen (3200-3320)120

Earlenious Cornwallen (3240-3360)120

Minorsly helped the Old Ways rebellion in the 3050's and was silently very opposed to the Venlencian regime. He had a terrible relationship with his son Raksious which may have been a factor that played in Raksious working with the Venlencian regime.

Raksious Cornwallen (3280 - 3405)125

Earlenious's second son. The beginning of the Cornwallen family reentering controversy as Raksious was extremely involved with the Venlencian regime. Becoming the main manager of the regime's funds in 3340. After the Old Ways Rebellion, Raksious began working with Illnius Tenurian and the V.T.P.F and was a main reason the VTPF was able to sustain itself in its early years. He was killed in a shootout in 3405 when the Vanguard Homeland Security Agency found and commenced an operation in one of the VTPF's main HQs. Was killed with his son

Raksious Cornwallen II (3320 - 3405)85

Son of Raksious I and being the part of the most brainwashed generation to the Venlencian regime, Raksious II followed his father into being very involved with the V.R (Venlencian Regime) Was a part of the military in 3040 and rose to the role of General by 3050 at only the age of 30 and worked closely with the Grand General (Lenthius Barenasian). When the VR fell Raksious joined his father in the VTPF and eventually became the Head Of Offense in the terrorist organization in 3380. He is a main person who recognized the lack of homeland security in many aspects of Vanguard society and jumped at the opportunities. He was killed in an operation conducted by the Vanguard military and Vanguard Homeland Security Agency with his father in 3405.

Raksious Cornwallen III (Raks) (3350 - 3470)120

Son of Raksious II. His father had committed all of his time into the V.R and so when the V.R fell Raks and Raksious II's wife fled the Vanguard as his wife had grown to hate Raksious II and wanted to get as far away from him as possible. Raks lived an unnoticed life until he moved back to the Vanguard with his son in 3450 and briefly worked with the Wilhelmian Larstrum administration before retiring to a manor in 3460.

Jenmenious Cornwallen(3270 - 3400)130

Earlenious's first son and had a much better relationship with his father than his brother did. Worked closely with helping start up the Old Ways Rebellion during its earliest meetings in the late 3340s to helping fund it in the 3350s. He also majorly funded efforts to rebuild the nation in the 3360s and 70s.

Lancelust Family

Palianius Lancelust(2950 - 3035)85

Born - Fallen Kingdom

Died - Vanguard Republic

Born in the Fallen Kingdom. Moved near to the Vanguard Private Force in 2970 when it was founded to join. Stayed behind when his son moved away and fought in the Vanguard Independence war in his 80s and was killed in action in 3035. Right after Herrstius was born in 2980 Palianius bought a parcel in the outskirts of Vanguard P.F company territory and built a house there

Herrstius Lancelust (2980 - 3090)110

Born - Fallen Kingdom

Died - Vanguard Republic

Herrstius was born in the Fallen Kingdom in 2980 near the Vanguard Defense Co. His father Palianius Lancelust was a high ranking soldier for the Vanguard Co. By 2990 a few high ranking members of Vanguard Co already had a strong distaste for OmniCo because of their continuous expansion and their attempts at buying Vanguard Co. This distaste was embedded in Herrstius at a young age, so while he interned at Vanguard Co, by the time he was 20 Vanguard Co was bought by Omni Co, so he refused to work there. During the 3010s when many speakers like Levict Venius, Orlandi Zarten, and Banwell Leshius began to become extremely popular, Herrstius pushed for his father and wife to move away deeper in the Fallen Kingdom. Palianius was very against this idea as he was still a fighter and strongly believed in the 3 speakers. This was opposite from Herrstius's distaste for the 3 speakers. After lots of arguing Herrstius decided to leave his father in OmniCo territory and move to the opposite end of the Fallen Kingdom in 3020. Herrstius finally felt comfortable enough to have a child and had Paulian Lancelust. Herrstius believed the Fallen Kingdom would easily win and defeat the Vanguard Republic during the Earth War, but he was forced to flee with his family after the Vanguard rampaged through most of the Fallen Kingdom territory. Herrstius moved to The United Asteroid Republic in 3044 with his family. The U.S.R was a very impoverished nation, so Herrstius felt forced to move to the Crusaders Mars after being convinced by his son Paulian in 3060 because of their relief programs. In 3075 Paulian and Herrstius were contacted by the Vanguard Republic asking them about their historical property Palianius Lancelust owned and Herrstius grew up in. This led to the discussion on moving back to the Vanguard Republic, but at this point the Vanguard was still viewed unfavorably especially by the Crusaders. When Richard Herlius was elected and brought peace to the social system that convinced the Lancelust to move to their historical property near an old forgotten Vanguard P.F building.

Kings of Fallen Kingdom

Merlentenian Nemphemus (2650 - 2740) 90

Reign - (2710 - 2740)

Fought in the Nemphemus Rebellion of 2670 on the Vanlen side betraying his family. This was a carefully calculated decision by Merlentenian in order to allow his family (he would be appointed duke) to keep its seat as one of the two Dukes of Mars. The head castle of Mars which was inhabited by a Vanlen family member who acted as one of the two dukes of Mars had an immensely powerful weapon on it and the only way to the castle was a narrow pass between mountains. Merlentenian valiantly defended the head castle during the beginning of the Great Dissolution starting in 2680. It had seemed that the Martian Kingdom was going to take over Mars since it had brought together most of all levies on Mars but they needed aid getting to the head castle. The Martian Kingdom bribed Merlentenian to secretly get rid of all of the Vanlen troops and defenses in the pass to get to the castle. Merlentenian did and then as he saw all of the Martian levies marching in the same spot he quickly called on his levies which were situated near the castle to conquer it, taking it for himself. Then he used the weapon on the castle to eliminate all of the Martian levies. This single move made it so the Nemphemus troops were the largest on Mars and allowed him to begin taking Mars with ease for the rest of his reign. He had 3 sons who sent the Fallen Kingdom into civil war after his death.

Malfrim Nemphemus (2670 - 2750) 80

Reign - (2740 - 2750)

The eldest son of Merlentenian, he had the strongest claim and was unaware of a civil war at first as he assumed his brothers would respect the line of succession. He was not prepared for an internal war in the slightest as he planned for his entire life to develop the Fallen Kingdom since it had already conquered a vast majority of Mars. This caused his realm to become the weakest of the three factions. He died after only 10 years on the throne in 2750. His only son Malfrim Nemphemus succeeded him.

Factions in the Tri-Brother Civil War that differed from line of succession

Merlion Nemphemus (2680 - 2770) 90

Reign - (2740 - 2770)

His argument for him to be placed on the throne revolved around ability and ambition. Merlion was a battle strategist and he strongly pushed for the Fallen Kingdom to expand beyond Mars, which was not an opinion shared by Malfrium. He was originally the most popular and powerful faction. He gained popular support through his Fallen Kingdom nationalism (strong patriotism). Merlion was believed to be most likely to win the civil war in the 2740s. This changed when Malfrian succeeded his father (Malfrium). Malfrian was a known master of both military and stewardship which made him appear to have more ability than Merlion which destroyed his argument to the throne. He and his children all died in a brutal siege by Malfrian in 2770. After his death with no heir apparent all of his supporters and troops split to either support Merfi's factions or they joined the man who just besieged them, Malfrian.

Merfi Nempemus (2690 - 2780) 90

Reign - (2745 - 2780)

Had the weakest claim to the throne which caused him to be ignored for the first 20 years of the war. This allowed him to secretly build up his power. Merfi argued that the Fallen Kingdom needed a younger leader in order to keep stability. He originally worked with his brother Merlion with his claim, but he eventually grew his own power hungry ideals and broke away into his own faction 5 years into the civil war. This argument greatly weakened when Malfrian succeeded his father Malfrium as he was younger than Merfi. He unleashed his power against Malfrian in 2760 and had put Malfrian into a bad position as he had focused most of his power against Merlion. Once Malfrian defeated Merlion he turned his full attention onto Merfi. Merfi killed Malfrian's eldest son Malfren Nempemus in 2770 which gave the effect of Merfi possibly winning the civil war. Malfrian eventually conducted an expertly planned ambush against Merfi's capital. The ensuing battle saw horrific losses. Malfrian was fighting in the battle himself and as the battle started turning against Malfrian he saw Merfi seeking safety in a bunker. Malfrian, who was already injured, spent all of his energy throwing himself into the bunker and single handedly defeated all of Merfi's personal guard. Then killed Merfi himself before collapsing on the ground and bleeding to death. Merfi's children, after discovering their father dead, surrendered to the retreating Malfrian forces as they were overcome with grief.

Malfrian Nempemus (2710 - 2780) 70

Reign - (2750 - 2780)

Succeeded his father (Malfrium) and he worked diligently to regain the lost power his faction had lost in the early years of the civil war. He was unforgiving and cynical but also a known master of war and stewardship. By simply succeeding his father he greatly weakened the two brothers' arguments to the throne. He initially focused on Merlion and held a barbaric siege against him in 2770 where he executed Merlion and his children. His suicidal battle in Merfi's bunker during the ambush on his capital allowed him to kill Merfi and thus convincing Merfi's sons to surrender to the quickly weakening Malfrian forces. Malfrian was going to consider peace brokerage with Merfi until he killed his son Malfren. Malfrian, while he did not see it, brought an end to the 40 year long civil war and unified the Fallen Kingdom once more. After his death, his young grandson Merclium would succeed him, inheriting a whole Fallen Kingdom.

rather than one of the three factions. He, like his father and grandfather strongly thought that the Fallen Kingdom shouldnt expand out of Mars. Merlion Nemphemus was very strongly in support of the Fallen cementing themselves as the dominant power in the solar system by expanding to other planets. The second sentiment is one utilized by Merclium.

Merclium Nemphemus (2760 - 2860) 100

Reign - (2780 - 2860)

He and his Fallen Kingdom while originally not a powerful faction in the Dissolution. Merclium would lead the Fallen kingdom to be the most dominant faction to come out of the Dissolution and he set the groundwork for the Fallen Kingdom to become the most dominant nation in the solar system, replacing the Vanlen Empire which had dominant rule for around 200 years. He spent the first decade of his rule rebuilding stability in the Fallen Kingdom and researching Earth as it had been mostly a mystery on what happened their. Began taking over Earth in 2790 which had been stuck in a “dark ages” (Apocalyptic Era) for a century as a result of the Grand Dissolution War. By 2810 it became clear that the Fallen Kingdom could not take over all of Earth at this time, but it did take around half of it with the other somewhat developed parts of earth falling into the Earth Kinship Kingdom which was established during the “dark ages” or the “wasteland” or apex of earth which was under half of earth fell into The Apex Militant led by a warlord. The leader of the A.M. was killed in 2860 and thus taken over, but his son worked with Merclius to give the apex area more autonomy while also providing development and also leaving the apex family to thrive in the area. He died in 2860 of old age and his grandson Merclius took the throne as Merclium’s son Mezlius Nemphemus died in 2850 at the age of 50 during a battle.

Merclius Nemphemus (2840 - 2900) 60

Reign - (2860 - 2900)

Introduced the Power Suit warfare in 2860 as a means to ensure he could fight as well or better than his troops when he got into old age. Was defeated in a power suit battle and killed by his youngest son Merzi in 2900. Took over the Apex Militant on Earth after the death of its warlord in 2860. This made the Fallen Kingdom control a majority of Earth. While he was a warrior he also held a great knowledge of diplomacy and he essentially united Earth under the Fallen with his trade deals and other good faith agreements with the Earth Kinship. He was also very honorable which is why he refused to disinherit his first born son Mercli after Merzi tried to convince him to make him next in line. Despite him and Merzi being very similar they had a terrible relationship.

Merzi Nemphemus (2880 - 2920) 40

Reign - (2900 - 2920)

Killed his father Merclius in 2900 in order to take the throne for himself rather than his older brother Mercli. He pushed power suit warfare near its apex. Was defeated and killed by his brother Mercli in 2920. During his ascendancy to the throne, the apex warlords worked with him to initially secure it. In return he gave them increased autonomy in their area. They also fought in favor of Merzi’s son Merzian to take the throne against Mercli after he killed Merzi. When Merzi took the throne, the Earth Kinship declared war on the “pretender” Merzi and wanted to install Mercli on the throne. This was a sign of good faith from the Kinship as they wanted to protect the Fallen's succession laws. They hoped Mercli would join in their effort, but since he lacked diplomatic skills and was selfish, he stayed in hiding slowly building up his force for a later attack.

Mercli Nempemus (2870 - 2960) 80

Reign - (2920 - 2960)

Defeated and killed his brother Merzi in 2920 after Merzi had killed their father in order to take the throne for himself. Saw power suit warfare to its peak in the mid 2900s. He would use powersuits often almost always which had a drain on his health since most power suit users only live to 60 or 70. It started in 2940 when the Fallen Kingdom began to lose small amounts of territory. Oversaw some parts of the Grand Rebellions of 2960. Mercli's son Mercilon Nempemus died in 2950 at the age of 50. This led to Mercli's grandson Merciless to take the throne once Mercli died. In response to the apex warlords fighting against him he took away their autonomy and took away more of their rights throughout the 2920s and 30s. In 2940 the apex warlords organized a sporadic rebellion that lasted until the 2950s. He was able to lead the Fallen Kingdom to victory in the war but they suffered major losses. The apex warlords would never stop rebelling but they would never be as organized as they were in 2940 behind the successor of the Apex Militant. In the end while the Fallen defeated the Apex Rebellion they ended up losing territory to constant rebellion and in 2960 many warlords would rebel as well as many others outside of the Apex area on Earth and even some on Mars.

Merciless Nempemus (2940 - 3300) 60

Reign - (2960 - 2990)

Oversaw the fall of the Fallen Kingdom Dominance and The Republic Uprising. The Great Rebellions of 2960 plagued the entirety of his reign. In order to keep control of some area of the kingdom, Mercli committed unspeakable acts. He notably hit a large moon with a Gamma Ray Weapon killing many of his own men, powersuit users and innocents. This caused a vast majority of power suit users to desert the Fallen Kingdom and found the Vanguard Private Company. Captured by the Vanguard Private Company in 2990 and later died in containment in 3000. The Republic successfully broke away from the Fallen Kingdom and took a large portion of its land with it in 2980. Nearing the end of his reign Merciless had to fill some empty positions in his court so he randomly selected anyone that said they wanted to be in his court. One of these men was Merzi's son Merzian. When he first took the throne many in the capital were already not a fan of the prince Merciless this led to many influential people coming to Merciless's uncle (Mercli's second son) Merfian to convince him to take the throne, but he was a very honorable man so he refused. Merciless and all of his spies heard of the attempt so Merciless revoked Merfian's title of Lord of Earth and made him Lord Warden of the main prison complex the Fallen had on Earth as well as the surrounding area. Later in the late 2970s as more and more became upset by Merciless the opportunity reached Merfian again to take the throne. It happened when Merciless built a lowly palace near the prison to place his second son (second younger than heir twins) Meless in order to punish him and quell his ambition. This led to Meless successfully convincing Merfian to put together an army. In a few months Merfian amassed a large army of mostly prisoners as well as the only Fallen power suitors left (2) except for one. The conspiracy was uncovered by Merciless early causing him to attack the prison. Merfian and his men were caught off guard causing Merfian despite his age to dawn his own power suit. In the battle the prison was destroyed and Merfian killed but he was able to convince Merciless his second son Meless was the one who defeated him. Meless was very talented and after he "defeated" Merfian Merciless finally gave him the attention and resources to do great things.

Merclian Nempemus (2960 - 3010) 50

Reign - (2990 - 3010)

Inherited the throne after his father was forced to abdicate after his capture by the Vanguard Company. The kingdom was incredibly unstable with small rebellions and corruption running rampant. The capital had also not been well repaired after Mercli took over after the destructive war that took place in the capital. As a result, the Great Wall, Main Palace, and the unofficial palace Merzian built were the only relevant buildings in the capital. The main palace had been falling apart. Not having much experience in any field he had to rely on the councilors for everything. He had entrusted the inner workings of the main palace and the repairing of the main palace to the grandson of Merzi, Merzili. He chose Merzili because he had heard great things from many of his courtiers. Little to his knowledge that his court had been being influenced and enlisted by Merzi's son Merzian to support him and his son to climb the ranks. Beginning in 3000 after the loss of much land to OmniCo, Merzili and Merzian were able to enlist many palace workers and courtiers to begin sabotaging the palace infrastructure. This was majorly aided through the fact Merzili was appointed to the position of repairing the palace. In 3010 Merzili confronted Merclian insisting he gave the throne to him, but he did it as an attempt for a peaceful usurpation because he felt bad. Merclian seemed to actually consider it for a moment knowing that the Fallen Kingdom was in a terrible unstable position, but then Merclian had a moment of self reflection and got a sudden passion to begin improving himself to better rule and save the kingdom. He told Merzili he will have him revoked of his positions. Merzili left the palace and gave the signal to collapse the main palace killing Merclian inside. Because Merclian was so disliked and Merzili had been networking with the military and every notable person in the capital he easily proclaimed himself king with little to no serious backlash. It was under Merclian and Merzili with their lack of backbones that allowed for OmniCo to own half of Fallen kingdom land on Earth by 3020. When he took the throne his twin brother Meless didn't contest but he did make sure he acted as a right hand man to Merclian. He ensured the Fallen didn't send any real attempts to rescue Merciless. When Merciless died in captivity, Merclian flipped out and banished Meless. Meless went willingly but he returned to the capital to help his brother at his request in 3010. He immediately noticed Merzian and Merzili's presence in the court and was suspicious. When Merzili took the throne Meless challenged him and started a civil war. But only 5 years into it Meless disappeared. He had fled to the Vanguard company where he met Levict Venius in 3025 and became good friends with him because of their shared belief of powerful government. In 3030 Levict venius was looking for a experienced replacement for Leshius Banwell and he chose Meless Nempemus to serve on the Free Vanguard Committee. In 3035 Meless made it clear he didn't pursue to be an advisor but he did work vigorously in the Vanguard government he built the ground work for an early Intelligence sector. In 3045 Meless retired from government. He was replaced as the early intelligence head by Evanict Bronlen.

Merzili Nemphemus (2960 - 3050) 90

Reign (3010 - 3050)

With the main palace being a ruin he moved the palace to be in the palace Merzian built (Merzian Palace). He dedicated half of the palace to be a newly established election assembly where all citizens of the Fallen Kingdom could elect an Assembly Advisor. The retired Kinship revolutionary Phil Schurz at the age of 120, visited the new King to help him establish the assembly, because he truly believed in helping all nations reform not just his own, who had rebelled decades prior. There would be 100 of them and they would act mostly as advisors but if a bill got a supermajority the king would be forced to negotiate with them and pass a law. While bringing more freedoms to the Fallen Kingdom he would rule over the Fallen Kingdom losing most of its land to the Vanguard. He was killed in 3050 by the Vanguard during the Last Camp War which decimated the Fallen Kingdom for years to come. Merzili's son Mezterin was also killed in the war as well as his grandson Merlentian. This left Merlentian's incredibly young son Marlenzi to take the throne. While Merzili showed himself to be a great peoples leader he was terrible to diplomacy and during his reign OmniCo was able to take ownership of almost half of Mars. In 3040 when OmniCo collapsed the Crusaders took ownership of the land. Eventually the Fallen completely taken over by the crusaders on mars. Merzili lacked the confidence to conspire or to do what was necessary. The entire plot to usurp the throne was headed by his father. (He had no balls)

Marlenzi Nemphemus (3050 -)

Reign (3050 -)

Regent : Malfren Nemphemus (3030 - 3060)

Reign as regent (3050 - 3060)

Created the 2 head of state system (established president and presidential court)

He was born only a month before Merzili died and never met his father. The young great grandson of the former king Merzili inherited the Fallen Kingdom at its worst standing power wise. Although the realm was still stable thanks to Merzili and him keeping the people happy with freedoms and quality of life (although the quality of life faltered in the 3030s and 40s. Marlenzi had his uncle Malfren act as his regent for his first 10 years of rule. During that time Malfren, who was also very young, built up the throne's power and took it away from the Advisor Assembly. This brought unrest in the Fallen Kingdom which eventually led to a peasant uprising in the late 3050s. It ended with Malfren being killed. By this point the young king, now 10 years old, was mortified by the bloodshed occurring in his realm. Marlenzi was confronted in the palace after it was stormed and refused to flee, instead opting to speak with the people. Marlenzi gave the Advisor Assembly much more power. This was a controversial decision as the king was still viewed as too young to make major decisions. But he was still without regent. What ensued was a internal war that involved different family members and powerful men fighting each other for the regent position. In 3065 with the war in a virtual stalemate, the king Marlenzi growing more upset by the people surrounding him, fled the castle and began rallying the people behind him to put an end to the war. He was able to defeat all of the opposition in the war and finally bring back peace to the realm in 3070. At this point he was 20 and greatly respected by the people. He attempted to rebuild his royal court but corruption and intrigue ran rampant and battles between the noble and commoners were often. He put down the battles quickly and asserted his dominance but a new bloody battle would have sprung up right after. It was in 3080 when he decided the royal court couldn't be trusted with any more control after a terrible situation. He began working with the Advisor Assembly to create a presidential position that would work alongside the king. The president would have a presidential court that would work with the royal court as well. He implemented his plan in 3090 which caused the nobleman to rise up in revolt in retaliation. Because of the quick rebellion, the Advisor Assembly and Marlenzi decided they should appoint the first president rather than an election to prioritize putting down the rebellion. After a lot of back and forth between the Assembly and King, they finally agreed and passed the appointment of Marlenzi's very distant relative who believed in a powerful centralized government but had a history of fighting for the reformists. This was Markus Nemphemus, who was Merfian Nemphemus's (Mercli's second son) great grandson (born 3020). The rebellion was put down in 3100 which allowed for the first presidential election to be held in the Fallen Kingdom. The fallen kingdom would eventually be mostly kicked out of Mars by the crusaders while they sometimes would take some land back on Mars their capital's main attention was now on multiple moons and asteroid fields near Mars.

The Earth Kinship State (2730 - 2910)

Kinship Government in Exile (2910 - 2960)

Started 10 years before the collapse of the Earth Vanlen Kingdom. Started after the 3 largest "cities" (shanty towns) of Earth united in 2730. They implored a Chieftain savage type of lifestyle and government. This was in stark contrast to the Vanlen Kingdom who had established many large "safe palaces" around the planet. The earth kinship infiltrated multiple of these palaces which were considered extremely safe from the outside world which was extremely dangerous and mostly lawless. Once this happened in 2740 the Vanlen Kingdom finally collapsed which left the Earth Kinship the main and one of the only established nations on Earth. In 2750 William S. Tucknot was born in the Kinship. The Fallen Kingdom had their first attempt to enter Earth in 2780 which failed but the remains of the shuttle crash landed next to one of the only "hotels" on Earth established by William S. Tucknot. The crater it created made Tucknot's hotel a popular destination and so Tucknot became very successful, inventing apartments on earth. He also created a new more civilized way to build developments (suburb model) it featured roads and business districts which was in contrast to the dirty alleyways most towns used on Earth. By 2790 Tucknot's new model began exploding across the Kinship but it was rejected by the Apex Militant and the rest of Earth. In 2790 the Fallen Kingdom successfully landed on Earth and began their invasion. In 2810 the Earth Kinship found itself in a better diplomatic standing with the Fallen rather than the Apex Militant, this was the first golden age of the Earth Kinship. Tucknot was elected Chieftain in 2820 and served until 2830 when he became unpopular. He became unpopular because he had the Kinship join in the war against the Apex Militant with the Fallen Kingdom. The way he saw it, the Kinship needed to gather up as much power as possible to buy time and eventually unleash it against the Fallen and take Earth. He strongly believed that all of Earth belonged to the Kinship. He created the first political party (Industry Party / libertarian / right wing) but political parties would not become popular until after the war in 2860. Right before William S. Tucknot died in 2840 he started a large campaign that sought to convince the Kinship the war with the Apex Militant was necessary and should be dropped out of. Once he died this campaign gained a lot of traction and brewed intense national pride for the coming decades. In 2840 with the election of Winfield Ferum, the Kinship went to war with the Apex Militant, when Ferum died in 2845, the Militant made a last ditch effort to escape the approaching Fallen and push all of their resources into the now disorganized Kinship forces. Panic ensued when the Militant came only a few miles of the capital, still with no leadership, the most influential member of the military Commanding General Fitzgerald Orasmus got the legislature to pass martial law and emergency appoint him as martial law administrator. After a year in office, under the harsh and bold moves by Orasmus, the threat was pushed away. The legislature then attempted to remove martial law, but suddenly the vote was stopped when many of the congressmen were arrested when Orasmus ordered troops to stop the vote by any means necessary. What ensued was a couple months of chaos. The legislature acted in secret, putting together an election. Isaiah Tempston won this election with his brave statements and appearances in riots against Orasmus. Tempston was able to amass a respectable corps of militia and marched them to the capital where Orasmus was. A standoff occurred between the "Chieftain's Government Militia" and the Kinship Military. Tempston gave one last speech calling for Orasmus to step down or he would "burn the capital down whether he and his men live or not". Over the next 30 minutes after that speech thousands of Kinship troops stationed elsewhere outside the city, came to join the militia forces. Just as it seemed shots were about to fire, Orasmus stepped out and agreed to comply with the dissolution of martial law. The Chieftain terms were reduced to 5 years in 2860. Between 2860 and 2880, the Kinship had a calm era where they were stable internationally and were focused on building up internally. It was in 2880 when the Kinship developed their very own powersuit corp called the Kinship Crusaders. Starting in 2880 a divide started to show itself in the Kinship on whether or not the Kinship had the right to Unify earth under itself and kick out the Fallen or that the Kinship should not take anymore territory and foster good diplomatic ties with the Fallen and build up its infrastructure. This led to the Industry and Labor Party to mostly be overtaken by the Kin Party (Pro Kinship Earth / High national pride / anti Fallen) and the Omni Party (Against Kinship Earth / believed Earth should be the home to many nations and they can build diplomatic ties with them / Pro - Fallen). There had been a few clashes with the Apex lords now under the control of the Fallen with local Kinship troops, putting their rivalry of civility and savagery to a high. In the 2870s many Kinship people were still wary of the new Fallen king and viewed the change as a negative one and continued the idea that the Fallen is the enemy, but it being pointed out more and more overtime by some politicians that the actual physical conflicts they've had in the last decade had been against the unrelenting Apex Militant. They wanted to make the Apex Militant the new main enemy in the Kinship rather than the Fallen who were beginning to open up the Kinship to stop border clashes and improve relations. These people were still a minority and they were met with major opposition by the up and coming moderate Labor member Herman O'Merat, who had just accelerated Kinship pride in his 2875 campaign where instead of emphasizing labor party ideology, he emphasized the foreign relation ideas of William S. Tucknot decades before. O'Merat said that the Kinship has lost sight of itself and it needs to prioritize its military and international standing to eventually reclaim its rightful position as the dominant power on Earth (he didn't expect to take all of Earth). O'Merat spearheaded the initiative for the Kinship to create its own power suit division. By the time of his reelection in 2880, he began "putting his foot down" with the Fallen. He would repeatedly demand small bits of land and extremely unfair trade deals. He was seen as a no bullshitter by the people and they loved it. King Merclius truly wanted to improve relations with the Kinship, knowing it was the first step in a united earth or in the least a peaceful Earth (securing Fallen dominance). Merclius was very willing to negotiate deals and special alliances with the Kinship, but he knew he wouldn't get anything truly beneficial for him with someone like O'Merat in power. Merclius then started a large campaign in 2880 where he would shut down most of all meetings with O'Merat and would instead meet with some members of the Legislature and strike a deal with them for them to hopefully pass. Of the ones that did pass, both took the spotlight away from O'Merat and made this new growing faction in both the Shrinking Labor and Industry Parties look great. In 2885 this faction organized under its own party (Omni Party). In the end Merclius's efforts paid off and the Omni Party won in 2885, although this was partially aided by the fact the still relatively popular O'Merat didn't run again over some health concerns and the generally unlikable but influential and co founder of the Kin Party ran in his stead. Gentry was also a pretty extreme Industry Party member previously and he expressed wanting to pull back on some of the small reforms O'Merat did and continue working on repealing Wescorian's. Then the floodgates opened for trade deals and the economy and quality of life in the Kinship exploded, the Omni Party and Chieftan Friedrich Danport were very popular. Although nearing the end of Danport's term in 2890, after some major land concessions and one major sovereign issue that allowed Fallen diplomat to sit in and advise in the Legislature. That allowed the leader of the increasingly growing moderate faction of the Kin Party, Jefferson Thime to run and win. Thime's campaign was centered around putting up a clear boundary or line in the sand in relation to the Fallen. He argued the Omni Party wanted to destroy the Kinship sovereignty. Thime said that the Kinship should still try to facilitate trade deals and other beneficial deals with the Fallen, but be more strict with the terms. Thime also believed that the right to rule Earth was firmly in the hands of the Kinship, but that they needed to do it slowly with deals with the Fallen to ensure a mostly peaceful transition. Thime's term was overall moderately successful, The first year or two were rocky with him pulling out of deals he perceived as unfair, but later on he was able to get some land concession deals in place that would be jointly controlled for a couple years before switching to full Kinship ownership. The Omni Party took advantage of the more neutral light Thime was painting of the Fallen to try to push public opinion over the edge to be positive. Hugh Tessar stepped up as a leading figure for the 2895 Omni Party nomination. A great speaker and seen as a honest and just man, he spoke that Earth is in a harmony right now, and the best end game would be for the Fallen and Kinship to have a pact where they both defend each other's interests. He introduced the idea that Kinship could be warriors of justice. This was extremely popular with the people and it won him the election. Tessar would further this ideology with deals and much more. By 2900 nearing the end of Tessar's second term, the warriors of justice idea was very prevalent. Some believe Tessar especially was blinded by this idea and made unwise decisions because of it, like siding with the outright worst candidate for King during the Fallen civil war. When news traveled that the Fallen was in civil war after Merzi usurped the throne from his father, thus stealing it from the true heir Mercli in 2900 and that the Apex Militant lords greatly supported Merzi, the Kinship naturally took the side of Mercli and fought Merzi's troops, even after Mercli disappeared to recuperate. This led to a decade long war which ended in Merzi taking over the Kinship under the Fallen Kingdom. In 2902 as the war effort became increasingly tolling on the Kinship infrastructure and public, much harder than they anticipated. The commanding generals pressured the Kinship legislature to vote to enter martial law. This effort was led by Commanding General Leland Wildrick. When it came time for Chieftain Hugh Tessar to sign the law and appoint a martial law administrator it was expected of him to choose Wildrick, but instead he appointed an upcoming General Ransom Schermenhorn, who had sent threatening letters to Tessar earlier on in the movement. Schermenhorn was more liked by the people as well as he emitted more Kinship patriotism. Schermenhorn quickly adopted a never surrender mentality. Schermenhorn quickly proved his calculated and sacrificial actions to be effective as even though casualties were skyrocketing, he was having the Kinship slow down the Fallen. By 2907 it had become clear to many of the suspended legislative members that the war was unwinnable. However, the Kin Party had committed themselves to Schermenhorn believing he could lead the Kinship to eventually taking all of Earth. In 2909 Ransom Schermenhorn was killed on the battlefield. In his stead the two highest commanding generals the 69 year old Wayland Sumner and the 39 year old John Whyte both began a fast paced struggle for power. Both of them immediately began securing parts of the military under their allegiance. Within the second day of Schermenhorn's death there was scattered fighting between Sumner Loyalists and Whyte Loyalists, all the while, Fallen troops closed in on the capital district. The legislature had moved to a secret location to both avoid the instability from both the Administrator conflict and the approaching Fallen. By the third day, Wayland Sumner was losing the military battle against Whyte, fortunately for him, Sumner had a close friendship with the Chief of the Minority, Nathaniel Gentry. This relationship allowed Sumner to also build connections with many members of the Kin Party as well as some in the Omni Party. It was through this he was able to get the secret location revealed to him. Sumner's plan was to ignore Whyte, and instead send all of his loyalists into the senate chamber where he would force through a resolution declaring him martial law administrator. This plan went into effect on the fifth day. Coincidentally, a bipartisan bill was being produced between the upcoming assemblymen Volney Bennett, Speaker Hugh Tessar, and Chief of the Minority George Eustis to end martial law and elect a Chieftain. This resolution was not very popular with the Kin Party, but it was expected a majority was going to vote in favor. Hugh Tessar was just about to introduce the bill and invite Volney Bennett to give an opening argument to it as Sumner loyalists busted into the room, guns drawn. Sumner soon appeared and took the podium from Bennett, where he gave a quick speech on his faith to the Kinship, and then told the Legislature to pass his resolution. This shocked the Legislative body who were now handed a bill to vote on to confirm Sumner's nomination at gunpoint. Whereas most of the Kin Party submitted and voted in favor of the confirmation, the Omni Party leadership physically fought against the armed troops, and after a struggle was actually able to overpower them and take control of the room. A very documented account claimed Volney Bennett and many of his members of his faction of the Kin Party joined in the attack, while George Eustis escaped through a back exit. Meanwhile Nathaniel Gentry was able to find a moment to tell Sumner that he was going to try to initiate the vote and with many of the Omni Party members in "active rebellion" their votes wouldn't count and his resolution could be passed. In the end Sumner was defeated, and Gentry wasn't able to successfully organize the vote during the chaos. After that they forced a vote through to end martial law. Wayland Sumner had been restrained and was subsequently arrested. They quickly approved hasty elections for the Congress, but did not do so for the Chieftain office. This essentially left the power of leading the country in the hands of the Chief of the Majority and the Speaker with some power being given to the Minority leader. The Kin Party, who had polled recently just two years prior had their image overlooked enough by Omni Party's brave actions that Omni Party won a majority. The Omni Party ran on a platform that was 100% in favor of surrendering to the Fallen to save the most lives and end the suffering. They also preached that they are the last beacon of justice for Earth and that they need to recover and return when the time is right to reinstate the rightful leader to the Fallen to restore balance to Earth. The growing Bennett faction in the Kin Party was also 100% in favor of surrendering, but only to slowly gain back their forces and undermine the Fallen enough to rebel and overthrow it. After a year of brokering internally and with the Fallen as well as trying to fight somewhat to somewhat better their eventual surrender, they finally passed a surrender in the Body. When the Kinship was annexed, many people were surprised by how badly their region was treated and thus, many people slowly drifted to favoring the anti-Fallen sentiment preached by the Kin Party. Then, in 2915 when a provisional government was finally set up, Volney Bennett under the Kin Party was able to win the unofficial Chieftain election. Meanwhile, by 2917, small reforms that were already taking shape in all of the rest of the Fallen Kingdom under Merzi were finally beginning to take effect in the Kinship region. Also, some major freedoms and reforms catered to the Kinship region started to be approved by King Merzi after years of negotiating by Hugh Tessar and Phil Schurz (both Omni Party) who had been elected as Assembly Advisors. Tessar and Schurz's accomplishments were enough to overpower the popularity of Bennett in 2920 as Hugh Tessar was elected Chieftain. He brought with him his standard savior ideas of restoring the Fallen because it was the just thing. A few months after Tessar was elected Mercli came to ask for the local Kinship to rebel in his favor against Merzi and his son. They agreed on the condition they regain some of their land's independence. Schurz, who was acting as chief advisor expressed his suspicion towards Mercli and thought Tessar should instal a backup plan, but Tessar didnt listen. In the end, with the help of Commanding General John Whyte acting almost as co Chieftain to Tessar, they won the war for him, but he turned his back on them, suppressing them more than ever. Tessar quickly became the most hated man in the Kinship region. This effectively killed the unofficial Omni Party in the Kinship region as revenge took hold of those with Kinship ancestry. The Kin Party held underground meetings for decades. The Omni Party savior ideology was dead, but Phil Schurz began rebuilding the Omni Party under the reformist ideology. Schurz wanted to work with the Fallen kingdom to diplomatically bring better freedoms. In 2925, Bennett began making considerable underground moves to rebuild the Kinship power to eventually rebel. He also began investing in a co-op group to disrupt Fallen interests internally. The co-op project would begin being somewhat effective in 2930. Leading up to 2940, John Whyte who had now switched to the Kin Party, told Bennett that according to his sources a major rebellion was going to begin soon, and the Kinship's best shot to overthrow the Fallen was now. Bennett planned on running again in 2940, but John Whyte began calculatingly referring to his plan to the masses and he exploded in popularity. Knowing that the Kinship needed to be united for this, Bennett dropped out of the race and worked with Whyte to build up patriotism. The Kinship Rebellion of 2940 was ultimately a failure. Whyte was a bit of a snake who had flipped to whichever side was winning to take advantage of and secure power for himself, but he did truly believe in a free Kinship and his rebellion idea. In 2945 as the Fallen had finally closed in on Kinship forces, Whyte ordered a mass retreat of both revolutionary soldiers and civilians. He wanted them to be a safe spot to avoid capture. He was cutting his losses. He was personally tortured by King Mercli for information on the whereabouts of other important Kinship hideouts, but Whyte stayed quiet. After months of confinement he was executed publicly. Whyte's death and the 2940 Kinship Rebellion sent a message to the Kinship people that after 40 years of not being independent, they had lost much of their pull and they just didn't seem to have nearly enough strength to rebel against the Fallen. A divide began in the unofficial Kinship government. A debate sparked on whether the Kinship should attempt to unite with other small revolutionary groups on Earth to eventually rebel. Some people wanted to wait and attempt to internally disrupt and weaken the Fallen government as well as push all of their resources into building up their militia. Volney Bennett weighed in on the situation saying that both sides were in the wrong. He stated that the Kinship should never lose sight of their own and unite with others and they also need to rebel as soon as possible, because for many men, they were running out of time. He believed they were only going to get weaker by looking at the trends overtime even if they pushed to make a larger militia. He believed the best time is now. Because of the debate in the wake of the 2945 election, the Kin Party splintered. The Kin Party adopted a new ideology under the leadership of Bennett. While two other parties split off from the Kin Party. The Revolution Party and the Horizon Party. The Revolution Party adopted the ideology of united with other revolutionary factions; they were under the leadership of Bernard Holton. The Horizon Party adopted the ideology of weakening the Fallen government overtime through covert operations and calculated attacks over the course of decades. They were led by Leland Joshua Muhlenberg. The Revolution Party was primarily membered by older or middle aged people while the Horizon Party were almost entirely younger when they were first established. Bennett narrowly won the 2945 election when he allied with the Revolution Party. Bennett was hoping most elected members of the Revolution Party would be more focused on rebelling as soon as possible rather than uniting with other revolution groups. This was not the case. Bennett spent almost 100% of the built up capital the Kinship had amassed and funnelled all into quickly building up their military. He would then shoot down attempts to meet with other revolutionaries, leading Bernard Holton in the Legislature to start secretly organizing meetings where he and other members of his parties would meet with revolutionary leaders. At one point in 2950, Bennott sent an executive order for a declaration of revolution. Within minutes the Legislature was in panic. Bernard Holton broke into Bennotts office and personally detained him and sent him to be transported to a prison. Holton then dangerously contacted his most trusted revolutionary group, the Fallen Earth group (which operated in an area that had been first taken by the Fallen in 2790). He told them the coordinates of the already dispatched militias and to stop the declaration from getting any farther. Unfortunately, the lines used to transport these messages had been tapped by the Fallen and they subsequently launched a massive regiment to the militia's positions. More than that, the Fallen also figured out the Kinship's hub location and sent troops to ransack it. The generals issued a an immediate retreat but many of the Kinship troops were still killed or captured. Then lookouts saw the Fallen troops approaching the hub. At this point Holton was in shock and in only a few seconds Leland Muhlenberg stood up and spoke during Holton's brief silence to take over the leadership position over the crowd. Muhlenberg directed everyone to a series of narrow tunnels under the city to escape. He stayed behind to help as many civilians as possible. Even still many of them were captured or killed. Bennott's prison transport was intercepted and Bennott was arrested by the Fallen. When the Kinship got settled into a new secret area, the impact of what just happened sunk in. This was a massive blow to the Kinship. It came out that Holton used risky communication lines because they were the only ones that could reach the Fallen Earth group. It also came out Volney Bennott had been arrested because of Holton arresting Bennott. Even though Bennott had become less popular in recent years, he was still a beloved symbol by the Kinship people. Holton's image was destroyed and Muhlenberg with the Horizon Party took the chance to explain that this is why the Kinship needed to take their time, to avoid these tragedies. He also said now the Kinship had very little choice, if they wanted to stay true to their ideas (not uniting with other groups) they needed much more time to rebuild. Leland J. Muhlenberg and the Horizon Party won a decisive victory in the 2950 elections. Muhlenberg's administration both did a fantastic job in pillaging funds from the Fallen and rebuilding the Kinship budget to quickly rebuild both its civilian sector and some parts of its militia. There were also multiple attempts to break Volney Bennott out of prison, but he was under high priority as a prisoner for the Fallen. Nearing the end of Muhlenberg's term they uncovered information detailing King Mercli's declining health surfaced in the Kinship intelligence. Leander Latham, a prominent Revolution Party member, took this information and preached this would be their best chance for freedom. He said that a transition of a royal is a rare situation that will take decades to happen again and that they needed to take advantage of this opportunity. He also said that the Kinship themselves were not ready. Mercli and his advisors had been pushing down the Kinship region hard since the incident in 2950, and the Kinship people were growing desperate as only a handful of their needs were being fulfilled by the struggling Kinship government. If they didn't have Muhlenberg's expertise, they wouldve had nothing fulfilled. This desperation herded people to popularity agreeing with Latham. They wanted change and fast, their lineage was becoming a secondary priority as everyone struggled to survive. Because of this Leander Latham won in 2955 and immediately pedalled down in contact and unifying with other revolutionary groups. Latham with his excellent communication skills did it all extremely quickly.

By the end 2955, after building off of the Fallen Earth's already drafted plans they had been working on from the late 2940s, they had a whole plan put together. Eventually those with Kinship lineage would rise up in 2960 right after word of King Mercli's death came out in order to establish "The Republic" as it was one of the only true democracies and it started a trend). They made some expansions onto Venus and that is where they eventually stayed and expanded more when the Vanguard kicked them off of Earth.

The Republic Revolutionary Coalition Declared Independence (2960)

Richard Ragmarlax (2670 - 2750) 80

One of the original 3 chiefs that founded the Earth Kinship. He started a skirmish with the other two that ended with them killed. He then started warlord type rule over the Earth Kinship until his death in 2750 during one of his many battles. He believed in the nomad lawless society Earth fell under right after the apocalyptic event. He spread tyranny everywhere he went. Chieftains of towns were indirectly encouraged to become warlords themselves. He believed in low government and yet at the same time high authority. Traditionalist

Millard Kleinstoff (2700 - 2770) 70

Following Richard Ragmarlax's death, almost half of the town chieftains in the Earth Kinship revolted with each of them striving for the prime chieftain position, after a few months there were only 3 main factions, with Kleinstoff being one of them. Kleinstoff was much more liberal than Ragmarlax. He stopped acting as a war lord and moved the Kinship forward but he didn't do much to bring order to the Kinship. The small amounts of reform that were given gave the taste of that progress in the minds of some chieftains and people alike. This culminated in 2765 when a revolutionary movement took hold. The movement would overthrow and kill Millard Kleinstoff in 2770 and reinstall the idea of elections. Something that was brought forward as an idea in 2730 to be implemented in 2740 until Richard Ragmarlax took over.

Harrison Laubenford (2730 - 2790) 60

Led the revolution of 2765 and quickly became the main figure head. He worked most closely with Jebadiah Miller and one other to start the revolution. Laubenford was immensely popular and reformed the Kinship into a true democracy. He was killed in 2790 during a rogue skirmish between two dissenting towns.

Jebadiah Miller (2740 -)

An active member of the revolution with Harrison Laubenford. The election he won had him running and another member of the revolution who had a lot more ideas for change. While lots of change did happen under Laubenford people were still afraid of this much change in his ideas. This led to Miller, the most traditional member of the revolution to gain popularity. When he was elected he began turning the clock back to the times of warlords. He preached small government but strictly enforced a unified military to fight wars with the fallen and any other foreign entity. He also essentially banned any further progress in development. He was ultimately impeached in 2795 and replaced by his more moderate running mate. Less extreme ragmarlax

Ulrich Gainian (2760 -)

Founded the Whig party later on after his term. He was against major developments and quickly became the figurehead of people wanting to keep a society similar to the early Kleinstoff reign. He was a staunchly low government. The group that supported him the most was anti war but gainian was more centrist in that regard. The war Miller put the kinship into with the fallen was one of the main things to push for his impeachment, so when gainian refused to surrender people were upset. Gainian refused to surrender under the current terms which were for the kinship to give up over half of their territory. For the first few years of his tenure he expertly fought in the war to improve their position eventually in the later half of his tenure he was able to convince the fallen to agree to more fair terms (essentially a white peace) this in part helped by a massive amount of internal problems the fallen was having on earth. During his tenure he brought down the government power immensely, actually putting into effect the small government preached unlike Miller. This meant while Gainian was against progress on development, he ultimately left it up to the individual towns. And development had become very popular so it exploded across the kinship with William S. Tucknot's model being the most prominent

William S. Tucknot (2750 - 2840) 90

Arvan Taylor (2770 -)

He was one of the leading members of the new age faction in the Whig Party. A very patriotic and isolationist citizen of the Kinship. Despite him being powerful in the Whig Party he was no one's first pick for Prime Chieftain. That was until in the final few months of Tucknot's term Tucknot tried putting the Kinship into a war with the Apex Militant, which caused uproar across the nation. Taylor's fiery speeches quickly made him immensely popular right when the election was taking place. He had no intention of running until the day the candidacy papers were due. Made the Kinship less dependable on the Fallen for many of the new technologies Earth didn't know about and missed out on during the century they were. After a couple years of his term the mass popular identity of him mellowed out, but he retained an above average approval rating. IT was believed he would have an easy reelection until the last year of his term had William Tucknot go on a major campaign trial popularizing the idea of war with the Apex Militant. It was advertised as a dying man's last wish and it made war with the Apex militant a demand the people were insisting. Taylor wanted nothing to do with anything outside of the Kinship and wanted to make it perfected self-sufficient. Taylor was also a large/medium government Whig, which was a small faction within the Whig Party.

Winfield Ferum (2770 - 2845) 75

Ferum had been an original member of the new age Whig Party, joining the party in 2810. He was staunchly anti development and was one of the most vocal voices speaking against Tucknot in 2820, making him appear to be the face of the new age movement, and one of the most influential Whig Party politicians in the 2820s. His opposition to Tucknot made it all the more surprising when he worked with Tucknot as a co author for his bill to go to war with the Apex Militant. The bill ended up tearing the Industry and Whig Party apart with internal divide on anti or pro war opinions. The most intense conflict was in the Whig Party where Ferum led the pro war faction against the exponentially growing anti war faction led by Arvan Taylor. Taylor had quickly recognized the controversy of Tucknots want for war as an opportunity to revive anti development sentiment as well as push for isolationism's popularity with the people. In the end Ferum struggled to debate against Taylor superior debate tactics. Ferum did think about running in 2830 but decided pro-war needed to unite behind one candidate, so Ferum actually aided Tucknot's campaign. All of this controversy around the 2830 election and the rapidly decreasing support of pro-war ideology caused the Whig Party to look into expelling Ferum from the party, in the end they after some debates the idea was dropped. Early on in Taylor's term Ferum tried to block many of his bills, but by the middle of his term, Ferum became a very cooperative member working with Taylor to write anti-development bills. Ferum also found Taylor's idea of self preservation a very important one, and he adopted it as one of his key ideologies. When Tucknot went on his dying wish tour, Ferum accompanied him much of it. He quickly cemented himself a candidate similar to Arvan Taylor but "with the concern of our future international standing in mind". This strategy worked as many people during Taylor's term were not fond of massive change. The overwhelming pro-war mentality and the narrow majority of people being anti-development won Ferum the 2840 election. Ferum brought the Kinship into a war against the Apex Militant in alliance with the Fallen. The war almost won by the time he died. Anti-development mentality dropped immensely by the end of Ferum's short term due to the fact cities were still growing, but now just not as effectively. Of course, that had been a problem brewing since Taylor. Ferum actually planned on addressing the issue in the later part of his term, but he died in 2845 before he could. When Ferum died the Apex Militant took their last dying breath shoving all of their forces into the now disorganized Kinship ranks. This caused a martial law to be declared that would end dangerously a year later.

Isaiah Tempston (2810 -)

During the 2820s as a teenager, Tempston disliked businessmen and politicians but still had a strong passion for government. He got involved in the youth wing of the newly established Industry Party. Tempston spent the late 2820s and 30s demonstrating the need for social programs to be established and for the government to have much more power and thus be more stable. He quickly became one of the most controversial figures in government from the perspective of both the Whigs and Industrialists. This was because Tempston was a strong believer of a powerful government. But he was also a very useful tool for the Industry Party as he utilized his great speaking skills to rally people behind the party. In the 2830's he was given a powerful position in the Industry Party inner workings. There, he continued to express his love for Tucknot's unrelenting push for development, but also his hate for the party's ideology of small government. He wanted to change the party doctrine, but at this time in Kinship history, big government was a majority by partisan dislike. Tempston was seen as an extremist for his large government views. In 2835 he was voted into the Legislature, this gave him more of a platform to rally more people to his cause, but he was still mostly unpopular. When Winfield Ferum died in 2845 and the government felt forced to enter martial law under the pressure of the Apex Militant, Tempston took time to explain that if their government had been more stable and strong they wouldn't be in this position. By the time Martial Law Admin Cmd. Gn. Orasmus attempted to secure power for himself indefinitely by sending troops into the legislative chamber, Tempston had already garnered a minor following in the Industry Party for his ideas. Also, since Tempston wasn't in any leadership position in the Legislature, he wasn't targeted by the troops to be arrested. When the rest of the legislature escaped, Tempston was one of the most influential congressmen not arrested. Also, more members of the Whig party had been arrested than the Industry Party, leaving more people who could have a slightly more open mind to Tempston. Tempston immediately stepped up and began organizing a secret session for the legislature. After a few of those and Tempston preaching that the Kinship needs to take a strong fist against this behavior, he gained an immense following. By the time the unofficial election was held, Tempston was popular among the legislature and was elected. Tempston then led protests and efforts to gain the military's support for the next few months. Tempston was able to amass a respectable corps of militia and marched them to the capital where Orasmus was. A standoff occurred between the "Chieftain's Government Militia" and the Kinship Military. Tempston gave one last speech calling for Orasmus to step down or he would "burn the capital down whether he and his men live or not". Over the next 30 minutes after that speech thousands of Kinship troops stationed elsewhere outside the city, came to join the militia forces. Just as it seemed shots were about to fire, Orasmus stepped out and agreed to comply with the dissolution of martial law. When Tempston officially took office and began rebuilding both the war torn government and corruption within its ranks, he became very popular with the people. He led efforts to build up infrastructure in neglected areas as well as he introduced some minor (but major at the time) social programs. All the while he increased the power of the government to keep stability and quality of life a priority. Very quickly though, Tempston was coming under intense scrutiny from the Industry Party leadership who had been released from prison. While Tempston did have a faction within the Industry Party, none of them held leadership positions within the Party. After many debates and struggles between Tempston and Industry leadership, with the most nasty encounters being between Tempston and Industry Party Chief Oscar Upham. When Tempston went to submit his candidacy papers for his election in 2850, he was alerted there was an emergency session of the Industry Party Caucus that expelled him from the party. This left Tempston to have to run as an independent. He still won with a majority. For the rest of the 2950s he continued to ramp up on his policies. Glenway Wescorian approached him in the late 2850s, asking if he wanted to be a part of the Labor Party he was building, but Tempston declined believing it was too left wing. Tempston was truly centrist in all but large government in many ways. Although many people were taking Tempston's leaning left policies and distrusted him for holding back, they wanted the full thing. The population had slowly become more radical over time. After a handful of distasteful mud slinging happened at the expense of Tempston in relation to his personal life and family, he dropped out saying "Politics is dirty, which is why I've always hated it". Tempston would remain a member of the Legislature.

Glenway Wescorian (2810 -)

Established the Labor Party. Extreme leftist. After only a year or two of Wescorian's term, the businesses in the Kinship began to struggle as he couldn't keep up with the government backed workers demands. More than that, Wescorian had upped government power even more than Tempston even planned. This all culminated when a prominent Industry Party member Archibald DeWitt led a coalition of a majority of the businesses in the nation. Together they protested, struck, and lobbied for Industry ideals in government. At a certain point they had pushed the economy in such a bad state, many Legislators agreed to their biggest term, which was to impeach Wescorian. A vote went through and Wescorian was impeached. DeWitt's Industry Coalition was filled with espionage and corruption in order to further the agenda against Wescorian and the Labor Party. A small extreme small government faction of the Industry Party, which had grown slightly in the second half of Wescorian's term, was strongly pushing for Chieftain term lengths to be halved. At one point this faction said that they would not vote for the impeachment resolution, which if they didn't, it wouldn't pass. The head of this faction, Maxwell Caruther, insisted on the promise the terms would be halved. In the end DeWitt agreed saying he would endorse the bill to give it more of a chance to pass. The DeWitt Coalition had expertly put enough small dents in Wescorian's image to feel comfortable in a Industry Party win for the 2865 election that would occur after Wescorian was impeached. Wescorian avidly spoke out until the very end that the coalition was malicious and disrupted the will of the people. Wescorian wanted to immediately run in the 2865 election but when he announced his intention during a Labor Party meeting, he was subsequently ousted from the Party leadership position in a no confidence vote, he was replaced by the head of the moderate faction of the party Maximilian Morrison. Morrison said to Wescorian that despite their previous discretions, this was not a personal attack. He expressed to Wescorian that if he ran under the Labor ticket, it was essentially throwing away the election. Wescorian would run for a seat in the Legislature and he won. Wescorian spent the rest of the late 2860s rigorously campaigning to repair his image and work against DeWitt. In 2870 with the release of the "DeWitt Papers" DeWitt's manipulation against Wescorian in 2865 was revealed. Despite this, the Industry Party had become very popular under DeWitt and many liked some aspects of his policies. DeWitt was extreme in the corporate rights department while he wasn't as strongly opinionated in small or large government. Maxwell Caruther succeeded DeWitt as the dominant member of the Industry Party, and he was less focused on corporate rights (while still believing in them) and more focused on small government. This made Caruther an exceptional replacement for DeWitt in the eyes of businessmen and more agreeable than DeWitt in the eyes of workers. The Labor Party would have had a much higher chance of winning in 2870, but their ticket was split when Wescorian and Morrison clashed once more over the Labor ticket which ended with Wescorian running as an independent. This made the Labor votes split while Industry and leaning working class citizens were united behind Caruther. Wescorian was hailed by historians by pushing the rights of workers infinitely forward. Worker rights had always been an issue in the Kinship and by pushing so hard, when the government eventually tried to repeal many of his policies they only ended up meeting him in the middle. He secured worker rights in the Kinship as well as many social programs extended existence.

Archibald DeWitt (2820 -)

Archibald DeWitt was a lifelong Industry Party member and devout follower of its ideals. He grew up during Tucknot's term in the 2820's and he was immediately hooked. Despite his young age in 2830, DeWitt was very up to date in keeping up with the news of the 2830 election. The outcome and switch up in popularity with DeWitt's idol (Tucknot) led DeWitt to dislike the Whig Party, especially Arvan Taylor. DeWitt grew up in a more neglected or underdeveloped area of the Kinship. During the 2830s as a teen, DeWitt started a number of short term small businesses that quickly made him well known within his community. In the last couple years of the 2830s, DeWitt began buying up or forcing out the few developer companies in his region through less than legit measures. He then built up his own developer company that built off of the successful Tucknot model. He assured himself a monopoly in his region, and would more than triple the development of his region by 2850. In 2840, when Tucknot was going on his final wish tour, DeWitt was recognized as a rising star in business by Tucknot, so he employed him to be both a speaker at his rallies to win over businessmen to Tucknot's war cause. During the later half of Tucknot's tour, Tucknot's Executive Assistant for the ordeal was forced to return home for personal reasons, and Tucknot had DeWitt replace him. This allowed DeWitt to meet hundreds of influential people, all of which he did his best to establish favors and a connection with to use later. When the Fallen entered the war with the Apex Militant, DeWitt had beforehand, using his insider knowledge to ensure Prime Chieftain Ferum would declare war, entered a partnership with Walter Shortausan to start a couple weapons factories. DeWitt was worshipped in his region and was elected unbeknownst to him as a write-in candidate for the Legislature in 2850. With the expellment of Issiah Temptson, the Industry Party hit a slump, with a minority of their party leaving with Tempston. The Industry Party Chief Oscar Upham, who had already known DeWitt, immediately gave him a top ranking position in the party. DeWitt quickly rose to establish a favor with every single member of the Industry Party, and a few from the Whig Party as well. During his time in the Legislature, DeWitt used insider information to grow his monopoly. At the same time, his growing monopoly was doing extremely beneficial work to the economy of the Kinship and many accredited a bulk of the work to him. DeWitt was able to convince many Whig Party members to jump ship and join the Industry Party by telling them the business minded parties needed to unite against the radicalizing Temptson and Wescorian, who had just announced his new Labor Party and candidacy for Chieftain. The move of Whigs to the Industry Party, which had already become almost irrelevant by 2860, was secured by Oscar Upham who was a small government supporter. He quelled the Whig's fear of DeWitt who was large government. DeWitt thought his alliance with the Whig's would've been enough for the Industry Party to win the election, but he underestimated the popularity of the Labor Party among the populace. The moment after Wescorian won, DeWitt began assembling, through his many connections with almost every single large business in the Kinship, a "coalition" of sorts to protest against almost all of Wescorian's policies. Part of this upheaval was to get the Industry Party to fully commit to DeWittian policies, so he endorsed, his previous business partner, turned politician Walter Shortausan for Industry Party Chief over Oscar Upham, who was still low government and disagreed with some DeWittian policies. DeWitt also called in many favors with contractors that worked on the government building to establish microphones in rooms Labor Party officials frequented. DeWitt was able to get one advisor close to Wescorian to relay information to his coalition. If DeWitt told his coalition to strike, the economy of the Kinship would immediately stagnate, as almost every large business in the Kinship suspended their hours. After a few times of this happening, Maxwell Caruther, the leader of the small government faction of the Industry Party, would begin getting behind the door bills passed to jumpstart and support small businesses in the Kinship, which DeWitt didn't have many connections in. Caruther would work with the Economic Board and the Wescorian Administration to just barely keep the nose of the economy above the water during these strikes. In the end DeWitt's coalition was successful in getting the Legislature to impeach Wescorian. Caruther wouldn't vote for the impeachment unless DeWitt agreed to half the term of the Chieftain. This meant a special election would take place in 2865 instead of the Legislature just appointing an interim one. DeWitt was elected as he was seen as a champion of running the economy. Meanwhile in the Industry Party leadership, DeWitt was beginning to not trust Walter Shortausan, while he was a DeWittian, he wasn't fully committed to DeWitt and would act independently from him, causing some of DeWitt's plans to fall through. So he endorsed one of the most outspoken, extremists, and fully openly committed DeWitt members of the Industry Party: Thomas Hale. Shortausan felt extremely betrayed by this and would later on be a contributor to the DeWitt Papers. DeWitt did not disappoint, his term was defined by soaring economic numbers as he controlled a great deal of it. Nearing the end of his term though, people, especially workers, began to get frustrated with DeWitt as he continued to inflate corporate power over everyday life. Still, the Labor Party couldn't seem to get a strong majority following. In 2870 with the release of the DeWitt Papers, his reputation plummeted, and people saw him as a manipulative personality instead of a hardass businessman one. The Industry Party was coming under exponentially increasing scrutiny with some of the highest ranking members of DeWitt's espionage being arrested. Maxwell Caruther stepped up to attempt to stop the Industry Party from falling below the Labor Party. Caruther had almost the opposite personality from DeWitt, which allowed him to distance him and his small government faction from the DeWitt controversy. Maxwell Caruther succeeded DeWitt as the dominant member of the Industry Party, and he was less focused on corporate rights (while still believing in them) and more focused on small government. This made Caruther an exceptional replacement for DeWitt in the eyes of businessmen and more agreeable than DeWitt in the eyes of workers. After the 3870 election, DeWitt was removed as Party Chief and "suspended" from the party for a year. When he returned, he held no special titles and was on the same level as an entry level member. Throughout the early to mid 2870s, DeWitt was sent to court for his alleged treason and espionage in the 2860s, as well as, DeWitt's multitude of large companies were being targeted by the early versions of the anti monopoly bills being passed in collaboration with small government Industry legislatures and Labor legislatures. DeWitt would eventually return to government in the 2890s as an independent, that flip flopped between both the Omni and Kin Parties, but most commonly with the Kin Party due to his views influenced by Tucknot. Eventually, DeWitt fled the country in 2902 to the Fallen Kingdom, where he struck a deal with King Merzi to continue his company under Fallen supervision. DeWitt was able to thrive during his later years in the Fallen with him regrowing his companies. He died in 2910, and his successors to his companies were eventually arrested in 2920 with the establishment of Mercli as king, who did not trust anyone of Kinship descent. DeWitt did what Tempston couldn't, he made the Industry Party predominantly large government under his influence.

Minimal government (generally)

Established 2800 by Ulrick Gainian

Never made a firm stance on war in the 2830s - 2860s (war with the apex militant). Differs between each candidate. Founded by Ulrich Gainian. Gainian founded the party under the principals to return the kinship to society similar to how it was in the 2730s when it was first founded, where each town essentially had its independence but had a "union" with their neighbors. That union was loosely led by 3 men. This system fell apart when Ragamrlax killed his co chiefs and established himself as the single chief. It wasn't known if the system would revert when Ragmarlax died. During the civil war proceeding Ragmarlax's death, some factions pursued a government reverting to pre Ragmarlax, but ultimately Millard Kleinstoff who had worked closely in Ragmarlax's government won militarily and set the precedent of holding elections like pre Ragmarlax, but not returning to the co chief format. Gainian ran under the Whig Party in the 2800 election, which he would ultimately lose. During the 2810 election as pro development sentiment became extremely popular across the Kinship, the whig party had an internal schism between the vast minority in the party led by Ulrick Gainian wanting to continue the party agenda of returning to a 2730's government and the majority new age members of the party wanting to pursue a low government agenda similar to how government was in the 2760s (Kleinstoffian). The new age faction ended up successfully taking control of the party and that became the general agenda for the party for the rest of its existence. The most consistent and staple ideology of the Whig party was anti development. When Gainian was usurped from his leadership position in the party in 2810 by the Whig New Age Faction (Kleinstoffian), he was replaced by the most popular of the of the faction, who was completely focused on Kleinstoffian ideology, small government, and anti development. This differed from some of the other relevant figures within the faction like Winfield Ferum, who focused on globalists issues and Arvan Taylor who focused on isolationist, self dependent policies. Ferum became more popular first when he became the most enticing opposition to Tucknot, his speeches made a lot of sense to the spectators. That caused him to briefly gain the leader position within the party until Tucknot's war statements in 2829 caused an explosion in isolationism, which the casted aside Arvan Taylor took advantage of. Ferum refused to take an isolationist stance. Ferum lost reelection to the Taylor endorsed Harvey Holloway, who had been a close ally to Arvan Taylor since he entered legislature in 2820, and was the second most influential member of Taylor's medium government faction, second to Taylor himself. Holloway and Taylor faced significant push back from the Whig Party as medium government was not very popular at all within the party. This all culminated to a big blow to Taylor's power as Holloway lost his re elected as Party Chief and was replaced with Ferum once again, who had expertly campaigned around his established image and his small government focus, while not focusing on his globalism, which was still relatively unpopular within the party. Ferum remained a popular Party Leader, especially when war with the Apex Militant first broke out. When Ferum died right before martial law was announced, the party wanted to elect Preston Orr, a 85 year old who was seen as Valentine Albright's second hand man, but only a year after they voted him in at a Whig Party Convention, he was arrested at the Kinship Legislature, he subsequently died from the trauma he experienced from the arrest in a prison infirmary. The mourning and now shrunk Whig Party from all of the arrests, voted in James Norton, who was not very well known, but not many well known Whig's remained free, as the Whig Party was hit the hardest by the Orasmus arrests. Norton was the Secretary of Commerce and Industry, appointed by Arvan Taylor, and kept by Ferum. He received brief national news when he came up with a plan for limited development in a concentrated place to produce resources for the Kinship to become more dependent. This is something he was assigned to work on and figure out an answer for by Arvan Taylor. When the remaining Whigs were finally released, they wanted to get back on the horse. The generally didn't like Norton with his centrist and compromising mentality, so believing the people just needed a jumpstart in passion for anti development they elected Acker Yursefian in 2850 who was a staunch and passionate anti developer. It became clear pretty soon after he was elected and the Prime Chieftain election went through with a Tempston victory, that the anti development issue was a dying one people weren't focused on. Pro-development mentality won against anti-development with a decisive victory. Norton continued preached that they should compromise with others in power to get some of their ideas passed in some form.

Labor Party

Pro development

Larger government

Established 2860 By Glenway Wescorian

The early years of the party under Wescorian were extremely radical. It was a piggy back off of the social centrism utilized by Issiah Tempston to become a socialist party. The moderate faction securely took control of the party with Maximilian Morrison working with the immensely popular war hero Herman O'Merat in the 2870s. Morrison had a good relationship with Wescorian and had developed trust there. When Wescorian was not reelected Party Chief and temporarily expelled from the party, Morrison ensured him that it wasn't political and that he would make sure the party would welcome him back if he ever made it back to good standing. This happened in 2870, but then Morrison became extremely annoyed with Wescorianian radical policies. Morrison believed the only way the Labor Party could win elections is to compromise and be more moderate, so when Herman O'Merat entered back into politics in 2870 and came to Morrison a year or two later asking for his help to usurp the party and run for Prime Chieftain, Morrison agreed because he believed O'Merat stood the best chance. In 2875 when Morrison directed the rest of his moderate faction to vote for O'Merat, Glenway Wescorian felt betrayed. The moderates had secured complete control with O'Merat's victory for the Prime Chieftainship. He kept his station as Party Chief, which was controversial. Then O'Merat betrayed Morrison by using the connections he gave to bring over as many as he could to his new Kin Party in 2880. Most Labor Party members did not agree with the Kin Party and stayed behind. When Friedrich Danport (a Labor Party member) came to Morrison to help him organize the Omni Party with some moderates in the Industry Party, he agreed. In 2885 when the Omni Party was organized and most of all of the relevant members of the Labor Party left with, it only left the radical extremist faction, led by Lemuel Scott, who was a very controversial figure. The last 5 years of the party's existence was characterized by extremist marxism, they organized riots and mass protests with their followers.

Omni Party

Established 2885 Primarily by Friedrich Danport in collaboration with Maximilian Morrison and George Eustis (influential centrist/moderate Industry member)

Friedrich Danport was elected the first Party Chief to ensure the first party doctrine did not incorporate into any other political ideology related to Industry or Labor too much. Danport held the position securely throughout his Prime Chieftainship plus another five years. But with the exponential growth of Hugh Tessar's popularity, he agreed to work with Tessar after some negotiating. Tessar endorsed a young passionate ally and friend of his, Humphrey Erwenstodd. Erwenstodd greatly succeeded in pushing the Tessarian agenda and popularizing it to the masses, but he lacked the ability to keep the party organized. Erwenstodd lost track of many funds and alliances with politicians within the party. Erwenstodd wasn't the best with people. This led to the party beginning to split dramatically in 2900, in order to fix this, George Eustis stepped up, while he wasn't especially popular, he was a centrist figure without much passionate opinions on differing ideology. Eustis was good at organizing groups and that is what excelled at the moment he was voted Party Chief. The thing is, as time went on, people grew to disdain his dull mindset towards things, he wasn't willing to risk much. This became evident when he fled the legislature during the arrests of 2909. When the Kinship Exile Government was established, Hugh Tessar returned. He had met an aspiring young administrator named Phil Schurz, together they worked the newly established Fallen Advisor Assembly and were both elected right before the exiled government was established 2915. They got to work right away, with Tessar working diligently in the Assembly to push for reforms of some kind to the Kinship area, and Schurz worked on reorganizing the Omni Party. Their popularity soared enough for Tessar to win 2920, but the subsequent terror that came from their aid to King Mercli destroyed any hope for the Omni Party to succeed ever again. Tessar agreed to let Schurz pull the plug. Schurz never fully gave though, he spent decades slowly organizing the Omni Party into a nation wide Fallen political group calling for reforms. This eventually all worked out when he was able to get the one of the most powerful government positions of the Fallen to be affiliated with the Omni Party in 2970, named Martius Erlenian. They would continue to push for reform and help those doing the same. They played an essential role in helping establish the new somewhat democratic system of 3010 in the Fallen.

First born son of Abraham I

Richmond Vanlen II (2560 - 2605) 45

Reign - (2590 - 2605)

Twin brother of Abraham II / middle child of Abraham I. Richmond was made regent upon his brother's (Abraham II) death. He immediately "captured" the young Henry, and proclaimed himself King, the same day. Since they lived in the same place and no one expected any foul play, the capture was as simple as Richmond walking down the hall to Henry's room and taking him. In the late 2590s when Henry turned 16, he ran away and began amassing a following outside the capital. Henry did this under the guidance of Harold Vanlen (Abraham I's younger brother) Then in 2601, Henry and Harold began their rebellion, they won in 2605 when they stormed they captured and killed Richmond II.

Henry Vanlen ? (2580 - 2610) 30

Reign - (2605 - 2610)

First born son of Abraham II. Richmond II's firstborn (self proclaimed Richmond III* unofficial) attempted to usurp, but was killed. His revolution was picked up by Ernest Vanlen after his death. Henry expected the rebellion to die out when he killed Richmond III*, but was surprised to see most of their factions held together when Ernest took over the reigns. This worked to Ernest's advantage since Henry had already started pulling back troops. Henry was killed on the battlefield, and Ernest I assumed power.

Ernest Vanlen I (2590 - 2620) 30

Reign - (2610 - 2620)

First born son of the youngest son of Abraham I (Mathias). Nephew to Richmond II and Abraham II. Henry was his cousin. Ran away from home when he was 10 and was then raised by Richmond II. Died young.

"Emperors" of the Succession War

Issiah Vanlen I (2620 -)

Reign - (2620 - 2630)

First born son of Ernest I. Throughout his entire reign he never made any decisions, they were all left up to his Regent, Richard Vanlen. Rightful succession.

Firstborn son of Henry Vanlen

Charles Vanlen III / II (2600 - 2630) 30

Contested Reign - (2625 - 2630)

Grandson of Abraham I's brother. (Harold Vanlen, who had helped Henry gain support for his rebellion in 2601)

Mathias Vanlen I (2570 - 2650) 80

Reign - (2630 - 2650)

Youngest son of Abraham I. Entered the war in the final year and quietly cashed in favors and forced many families on the outskirts of the Vanlen to build him an army. He was able to lure the Issiah/Richard, Frankfurt, and Charles III armies into a valley where they all began fighting with Mathias watching from above with a massive arsenal. In a moment he released hell onto the armies and completely decimated them, killing the three other "emperors/regents". Mathias took the emperor's throne and while the first 5-10 years there were some rebellions, his iron fist and strict surveillance eventually took hold and, while cruel, brought stability back to the Vanlen Empire, which it had been without since the late 2500s. He died after he contracted a dangerous illness in 2648, but the maesters didn't treat him under the order of the heir. Mathias was not well liked and was feared across the Empire, which was something his son was aware of, so he had also been slowly removing his emperor's guard hoping someone would conspire to kill him.

Michael Vanlen ? (2600 -)

Reign - (2650 - 2665)

Eldest son of Mathias I. He was a drastic change from his father. He was known as a great ruler because he understood how to be kind and compassionate, while also knowing how to rule with force when needed. He was loved across the empire until in 2664 it was revealed he was having an incestuous affair with his sibling. This caused riots to form across the Empire. As a crowd broke into the main castle and many were killed, Michael decided to abdicate in order to restore order.

Robert Vanlen II / III (2630 - 2690) 60

Reign - (2665 - 2690)

Eldest son of Michael. He was known as incompetent. Robert did not have a backbone and was easily pushed around. This quickly led to many lords to use him to gain more independence. The major Nemphemus Rebellion of 2670 had started to get planned almost the moment Robert took the throne. His two kids Michael and Vincent were known to be much more adapted to rule. In 2680 as the Vanlen Empire began imploding and Earth became a field of constant war. Robert never left the main palace and died in the rubble. When Earth was cut off from the rest of humanity in 2690, it was believed everyone on it had died including Robert's eldest son Michael, so the throne passed to the Lord of Mars Vincent III / IV.

Vincent Vanlen III / IV (2650 - 2710) 60

Reign - (2690 - 2710)

The declared younger twin son of Robert II / III. He took the throne passing his brother, who was declared heir after he and his father disappeared on Earth when the apocalyptic era started. Vincent was an extremely formidable leader and many believed under his leadership the Vanlen Empire would survive and possibly begin regaining territory. This is thought to be true, if it wasn't for the fact Vincent was betrayed by Merlentenian Nemphemus, who killed him in his efforts to establish the Fallen Kingdom.
